137 Years, No Life Japan in Brazil A Few Arbuckles, Only Good Wages—Good Times

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Ca-Be-Nah-Gewn-Wunce, Chippewa Indian, is dead, aged 137. He could remember the war of 1812, and was married eight times. In the whole 137 years he LIVED less than Keats lived, in that one night when he read through "Chapman's Homer."

The Chippewa Indian in his 137 years also knew less real life than Napoleon knew in ten seconds, as he took the crown in his own hands and put it on his head.

It is how MUCH, not how LONG you live that counts. Giant turtles on the Galapagos Islands live a thousand years, and never really live at all.

The Japanese have established a gigantic colony in Southern Brazil.

Thousands of immigrants have come in. A great, a practically impregnable Japanese sea port and coaling station is planned. The Brazilian government has withdrawn subsidies hitherto paid to Japanese immigrants and wonders how it can check the establishment of a Japanese fortified seaport on South American soil.

At the same time you read that United States fortification at the Philippines and Guam are stopped. Those fortifications would have given this country control of the Japanese situation, as it affects this continent north and south. And that control we abandon at the request of the Washington conference sentimentalists.

This is Japan's day. We guarantee her rights in the Pacific, and she establishes herself in South America.

Home clergymen and missionaries gathered at Rockford, Ill., deplore world conditions. A missionary described "South African jungle natives concocting a home-brew so horrible that it makes them walk backwards. They make alcohol of everything."

That is the worst of it, any vegetable substance can be changed into poisonous alcohol by anybody, and that makes real prohibition difficult.

Bishop Nicholson wanted to know whether the church could make its young people into "Fatty" Arbuckles and Peggy Joyces, or Sherwood Eddys and Frances Willards? The world will continue to produce a few of the "Fatty" Arbuckles and a few of the Frances Willards, and hundreds of millions of good average human beings. Neither Arbuckles nor Willards, but behaving themselves pretty well and carrying on the drudgery of civilization.

William M. Wood, head of the American Woolen Company, tells his thousands of employes they need fear no cut in wages, at least for this season: The class most interested in maintaining wages is not the wage earning class, but the employing and capitalist class.

All that anybody can get is what the average man has to spend. To know the difference between labor at $5 a day and labor at 10 cents a day, go to China and try to make money there.

Where the crowd has no money there is no money to be made. And the more the average man has, the more the exceptional man can get. Let able men remember that.

The soldiers' bonus will go through, unless some bad excuse is found at the last moment. This worries many that have money and dread taxation. Yet the bonus will increase prosperity, especially for those that are well to do.

Millions paid out will be immediately put into circulation. Soldiers that will get the bonus need the money for immediate expense. Ten days after the money is distributed it will be spent, and begin doing its work on trade revival.

Russia, it is said, wanted to cut the Russian army down 50 per cent, but Trotzky, who rules the army, says "no." You are told the "Trotzky faction" laughs at this coming Genoa conference and its suggestion.

Lenin is supposed to be boss of Russia. But Trotzky is known to be boss of the army, a wonderful transition from a small room in a New York tenement house to boss of an army of a million. Power finds its place.

Lenin may live to find that in great national upheavals whoever has the army has the power. Rome knew it often, France knew it under Napoleon.

The days of real flying, kind worth while, are approaching. It is said that a helicopter, a flying machine that goes straight up in the air, then off at right angles, has traveled at 325 miles an hour. A German is planning scientifically, but is more words, to cross the ocean in five hours and go around the world in two days. That will be done inside of a few years.

Within twenty-five years, at least, flying will have overcome wind and weather conditions completely. The next step will be real speed, ultimately a thousand miles an hour, with absolute safety, which will mean going around the earth as fast as the sun seems to go around it.

LOVE CULT EVIDENCE IS ALSO PROBED

Slain Director Believed to Have Been Member of Mysterious Oriental Sect

By International News Service.

Los Angeles, Feb. 9.—Trace of a revolver which may have been used by the slayer of William Desmond Taylor, film director, has been found and the weapon probably will be turned over to the district attorney's office within a few hours, it was learned today.

The weapon is said to have been found by a man whose name and address is known to investigators who searched the Taylor home the day after the murder.

With the revolver in their possession, investigators will have the most important clew discovered since Taylor was killed, it was declared.

Investigators attached to the district attorney's office today are looking into the affairs of an asserted love cult with the ways of mysterious Orientalism.

The slain director is declared to have been on intimate terms with the members and possibly to have been one of the cult followers.

Henry Peavey, negro valet of the slain director, was taken to police headquarters today and subjected to a severe questioning. Later he was taken to the District Attorney's office, where it was understood he would be subjected to a further rigid examination.

Other sensational developments in the case are expected today as a result of centralizing the investigation

WIDOW AND CASHIER MISSING

Springfield Official Charged With Larceny of $5,000 From His Employers

Springfield, Feb. 9.—Roger Lane, thirty-seven years old, of Sprucelend street, for several years cashier of the local branch of the National Biscuit Company, has been missing for two weeks.

Warrants for his arrest have been issued, charging him with the larceny of $5,000. Officials of the company today declared the shortage would run to more than $20,000.

Mrs. Elsie Short, a widow, thirty-one years old, mother of two children, also is missing. The police believe she married Lane after he left here, taking her children with her.

The police of Southern cities have been notified and asked to keep a look-out for the man and woman.

Auditors of the National Biscuit have arrived from New York to go over the books of the missing official.

Friends of Lane, who is the son of Charles E. Lane, formerly owner of one of the largest wholesale groceries in this city, but who recently failed in business, declare the romance between the young man and the widow was of nearly a year's standing.

Lane was said to have met Mrs. Short while she was living at a cottage she owns at Nine Mile Pond early last Summer, and to have been a constant visitor there after that.

On November 22 Lane and Mrs. Short were returning to her home on Lorraine avenue when they were held up and robbed by two highwaymen, who escaped after a chase.

Lane and Mrs. Short have been seen frequently together at all sorts of social affairs and their friends in this city are many.

The cashier was bonded for $15,000, biscuit company officials stated.

Work on Guns For Navy Is Halted

By Associated Press.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Orders have been issued by Secretary Denby for the suspension of all ordnance work designed for the vessels affected by the naval limitation treaty signed at the Washington arms conference.

The effect of the orders, it was said at the department, will be to lay off temporarily those employes who have been engaged on such work.

The yards covered by the orders were those at New York, Philadelphia, Norfolk, Va., South Charleston, W. Va., Mare Island, Cal., and possibly Boston.

Approximately 1,550 of the 7,000 employes of the Washington Navy Yard were handed temporary furloughs without pay. Most of them were machinists.

There will be no men laid off at the Charlestown yard following the new order to stop work on the construction of battleships. This was announced today at the office of Admiral Wiley.

No battleships are being constructed at the Charlestown yard, it was said.

Unionists Mobilized to Prepare for New Battle With Invaders

By International News Service.

London, Feb. 9.—Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail Eireann (Sinn Fein Parliament at Dublin), called at Premier Lloyd George's office in Downing street today and assured both the Prime Minister and Colonial Secretary Winston Churchill that the Irish Provisional government was endeavoring to quell the disorders on the Ulster border and prevent further raids across the frontier.

Belfast, Feb. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Several additional kidnapings of Unionists occurred today in County Fermanagh. Four Class "B" special constables were kidnaped in the Rosslea district. They were taken in the direction of Ballybay, where it is believed other prisoners are being kept.

Five special constables and four soldiers, fully armed, while on their way to Enniskillen in an ambulance to bring back men wounded at Newton Butler in the early morning, were captured while passing through

NORTHCLIFFE FINDS UNREST IN PALESTINE

London, Feb. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Lord Northcliffe, who is visiting Palestine, is reported in a Jerusalem dispatch to the Times as expressing regret at finding the country in a less satisfied state than when he was there years ago. The Grand Mufti of Jerusalem and other members of the New Moslem Religious Council told him that the impression that Great Britain was actively supporting Zionism was creating a bad effect.

JUDGE MURRAY STIRRED BY TARDY PROSECUTORS

When Judge Murray stepped into his session of the Municipal Court today he found twenty defendants awaiting trial, and almost no prosecuting officers as complainants. "Some day," he warned, "I'm coming in here and dismiss the entire list of cases for want of prosecutors." Tardy police sergeants and patrolmen then began to rush breathlessly into court.

GIRL STUDENTS TO 'DATE' UP MEN FOR 'LEAP WEEK'

Eugene, Ore., Feb. 9.—Next week will be senior "leap week" at the University of Oregon. Women members of the senior class will be required to make "dates" with the male members and pay the expenses of such appointments on a basis of fifty-fifty, according to a decision of the class today. The Oregon "Emerald," the student paper, will each day print stories of the couples, where they went and how much money they spent.

WINCHESTER BANK MEN ACCUSED

Warrants charging misapplication of $75,000 of the funds of the Winchester National Bank were issued today against Edward S. Foster, who has been its president, and Edward Grosvenor, who has been cashier. A warrant charging Joseph Adams of Manchester with aiding and abetting Foster and Grosvenor was also issued. The warrants against Foster and Grosvenor allege that from about October 1, 1920, they "willfully misapplied funds and credit of the bank to the value of $75,000." National Bank Examiner Edward F. Parker said today the bank is solvent. Foster has been president of the bank since Jan. 10. For four years he was vice-president. Grosvenor has been cashier for about two years. He was formerly employed in a bank at Uxbridge.

10,000 "PRO" CRIMINALS RESIDENTS OF CHICAGO

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Chicago is the home of about 10,000 professional criminals, or about one-third of one per cent. of the city's population, according to estimates of the Chicago Crime Commission. The reason for such an unprecedented number of law breakers here is ascribed by experts to the slowness with which wheels of justice are set in motion.

BURRELL SUES SWIGS FOR $10,000

Simon Swig, vice-president, and Benjamin H. Swig, treasurer, are accused of "improper" banking practices and deception in a suit for $10,000 filed against the Tremont Trust Company in the Superior Court today by Fred J. Burrell, former State treasurer.

Burrell seeks to recover $5,250 which he says he paid for fifty shares of the capital stock of the trust company three days before it was closed by the bank commissioner.

He says he bought the stock on representations by the two Swigs that the company's affairs were in good shape and alleges that the stock is now without value.

Burrell said the Swigs told him the stock had never before been issued, but that he later found others had owned the stock and that twenty-five of the shares had stood in the name of Benjamin Swig. He was told, says Burrell, that the institution was solvent, that it daily carried sums in excess of the reserves required by law, that its outstanding loans were safe and liquid and that the bank commissioner had finished his examination and had approved the accounts.

The Swigs, Burrell declared, permitted him to borrow $5,000 from the Tremont Trust Company with which to buy the shares. He gave them a six months' note at 7 per cent. The certificate for the shares was then used as collateral for the note.

The Swigs, says Burrell, had full knowledge that it was "improper" for a trust company to make loans on its own capital stock.

WILSON SOUGHT SHOWDOWN IN FIGHT

Harold D. Wilson, Federal prohibition enforcement director for Massachusetts, who was deposed following his sensational raid at the Quincy House during a G. O. P. dinner, has written a series of articles exclusively for the Boston American, describing the events that led up to his discharge. The fourth of the series follows:

By HAROLD D. WILSON.

CHAPTER IV.

The maintenance of two competitive enforcement offices, although the agreement of July clearly placed me in charge of that feature of the work, was a further handicap.

The following letter is submitted as an indication of a typical mix-up due absolutely to the competitive spirit and lack of cooperation:

GRIFFITH DEMANDS PEACE

Monaghan. The car was surrounded and seized by a party of armed men.

Ulster's frontier was virtually a line of steel today, following the raids yesterday.

From Portadown, County Armagh, to Belleek, on the Fermanagh-Donegal border, forces of "specials" were on guard, as well as heavy contingents of the regular constabulary. It was estimated that 5,000 men were engaged in policing the line.

The forces began to move toward the border yesterday, following news of the raids. The roads leading southward from Belfast today presented scenes of activity, motor trucks and armored cars bearing the so-called "A" and "B" specials toward the border. Accompanying them were other trucks and stores of ammunition.

Major Miles of South Donegal, one of the prisoners taken by raiders, returned to his home today. Others from the same area are reported to have been released.

The wife of Ivan Carson, former high sheriff of Fermanagh, who was kidnaped Wednesday, received a letter from him today. The missive, which bore no address, said the writer was well and had no cause for anxiety. He is a relative of Lord Carson, former Ulster leader, and commanded a patrol of specials in the Fermanagh encounter with the raiders.

High tension prevails at all points. Strangers traveling through the six counties are subject to the closest scrutiny and in some cases are halted and interrogated.

No communication was possible with Enniskillen today in consequence of the wires from this city being cut.

Colonel Wickham, commanding the Ulster specials, has received a communication from Dublin Castle stating that the Provisional Government was sending special officers to investigate the kidnaping. The number of them held captive is placed at two hundred by the Northern Whig, Unionist newspaper, which adds:

"They are being held at the mercy of exiles who, as the events of the last two years have shown, are capable of atrocities as vile as any that Bolsheviks or Bashi-bazouks ever committed."

Order Irish Army Leaders to Free Prisoners

Enniskillen, County Fermanagh, Ireland, Feb. 9.—Quiet had been completely restored here this forenoon. The roads are being closely patrolled.

The provisional government, it is stated, has telegraphed instructions to the commanders of the Irish republican army to release the prisoners taken during the raids.

BLAMES ULSTER FOR PROVOKING TROUBLE

Irish Army Chief Says Patience Was Tried by Attacks by Orange Mobs

Dublin, Feb. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Owen O'Duffy, chief of staff of the Irish Republican army, has issued this statement:

"That there should be spontaneous and determined action in Ulster is not surprising. The patience of our people there has been sorely tried lately by continued raids, arrests and tortures inflicted upon them by agents of the Northern government.

"The majority of those in prison in Belfast and Derry are suffering because they carried out my orders while I was liaison officer—to protect the lives and property of Catholic civilians from the ravages of Orange mobs when those who are entrusted with law and order refuse to give protection."

The statement concludes: "Let the Northern government immediately release our prisoners. We have shown by our actions our desire to have peace; let the North show by similar actions that they desire to have peace. Granted this, none will believe there would be difficulty in finding a common ground."

URGE SMUTS AS PEACEMAKER IN ULSTER

Regarded as Best Arbitrator to Deal With Boundary Dispute

London, Feb. 9 (By the Associated Press).—The name of General Smuts, Premier of the Union of South Africa, was mentioned today as a possible arbitrator in the Ulster boundary dispute, according to the Liverpool Post.

If Michael Collins and Sir James Craig fail to reach an agreement on the boundary issue between Ulster and South Ireland and it becomes necessary to appoint an arbitrator the government intends to ask General Smuts to act. General Smuts, it is recalled, was prominent in the early stages of the negotiations leading up to the signing of the Anglo-Irish treaty.

The number kidnaped in the Ulster raids is variously reported, the highest estimate being nearly 300, although most accounts put the figure considerably lower.

The London morning newspapers, including those most friendly to Irish nationalism, severely condemn the kidnapings, which the writers fear will prevent the pacification of Ireland and shatter the hopes based on the Anglo-Saxon treaty.

MEN RESCUED IN BREECHES BUOY

ATTEMPT MADE TO HAUL OFF THISTLEMORE

Captain and 25 Members of Crew Refuse to Go Ashore at Peaked Hill Bar

Provincetown, Feb. 9.—Salvage crews of the T. A. Scott Company arrived here today from New London and began preparations to float the stranded British freighter Thistlemore on Peaked Hill Bar.

The steamship was driver over two sand bars by the force of yesterday's gale and doubt was expressed today that the freighter could be taken to deep water. The fact that the Thistlemore brought up on a sandy stretch of beach is the only reason she was not irreparably damaged.

Twenty-five members of the crew of the ship are standing by Captain Will Fortune, who refuses to go ashore in the breeches buoy or the life boats sent out to the vessel by coast guardsmen. Eighteen members of the crew were landed.

Twenty coast guardsmen from the Peaked Hill and Race Point stations succeeded in running the breeches buoy to the ship. The rescuers were in charge of Captain Manuel Gracie and Captain H. L. Collins.

Their work was hampered by the breakers and several of the men suffered from frozen fingers. All were near exhaustion from battling the surf to get at the men of the Thistlemore as they neared the shore in the breeches buoy.

PINKER, AGENT FOR WRITERS, IS DEAD

New York, Feb. 9.—James B. Pinker, London literary and dramatic agent, who had many prominent British and American writers as his clients, died here last night of influenza. He arrived from England Friday.

SHOWDOWN WAS DEMANDED BY WILSON

ing bottles of whiskey, I immediately got in touch with the railroad police and placed some of my men on guard.

"The car was locked and sealed and as I was unable to secure a search warrant on Saturday the 11th, I arranged with the railroad police to put men with rifles on the car and guard it until a warrant could be secured on Monday.

"On Monday morning I made arrangements with the United States Commissioner to obtain a proper search warrant for this car. In the meanwhile some of Director Potter's men went to the freight yards, and although the car was still being guarded, and although the railroad police informed these agents that I had the matter in charge, they broke the seal and invaded the car.

"This all occurred while I was securing a search warrant at the office of the United States Commissioner. I immediately called Mr. Potter and informed him of what had happened and requested that he call off his agents. He refused to do this, so I went to the freight yards myself and ordered his men off the premises.

"The liquor is now in the government warehouse and, fortunately to date, no one has put in a claim for the same.

"It seems too bad where a search warrant is obtainable, to resort to tactics which might jeopardize the validity of the government's case. This is but one citation of the divided authority and lack of co-operative endeavor between the director's office and mine.

"Very truly yours,
"HAROLD D. WILSON."

Matters So Bad He Demanded Showdown

In October matters got so bad that I had to absolutely demand a showdown. The following letter of October 7 is self-explanatory:

"Dear Major Haynes:

"It is about three months since I saw you in Washington relative to my being superseded as Federal prohibition director in the State of Massachusetts. At that time you treated me with the utmost courtesy and assured me that you were quite anxious that I should remain in the service.

"One of your instructions, which I have tried conscientiously to follow out, was to come back to Massachusetts determined to get along with Director Elmer C. Potter. This seems to be an impossibility.

"I am heart and soul for prohibition enforcement and have been working with might and main during the past three months to give Massachusetts genuine enforcement and I believe I can state without boasting that I have been getting some results. I am not at all desirous of having any fight with Mr. Potter at this time, but I honestly believe that we should come to some understanding immediately.

"I believe Mr. Edson Brown, your representative in New England, will attest that I have gone more than 50 per cent. of the way to be friendly with Mr. Potter, but all to no avail.

"I am out on the front line trenches leading raids most of the time, but whenever I return I find that some moves have been made to cripple my efficiency. I have just received my pay for the month of September and find that after holding up the same for some seven days, $39.43 has been deducted.

"If my pay voucher was in error I should have been glad to explain, but this arbitrary deduction without giving an opportunity for an explanation is hardly a square proposition.

"I should appreciate very much an opportunity to come to Washington for a personal conference; not with the intent of starting any row, but so that I might explain first hand the work that I am doing and see if something cannot be done to compel less friction.

"There is no sense in continuing under the present conditions. I have altogether too much to do on the enforcement end to waste my time or the time of the department in petty two-cent haggling with Mr. Potter's office.

"I shall consider it a great favor if you will authorize a one-day visit to Washington at the earliest possible moment.

"Sincerely,
"HAROLD D. WILSON."

TAYLOR MURDER MOTIVE, ROMANCE OR DRUGS, SAYS CRAIG KENNEDY

SOLUTION HANGS ON SERVANTS

By ARTHUR B. REEVE
Creator of "Craig Kennedy," Scientific Detective.
Written Expressly for Universal Service.

(Copyright, 1922, by Universal Service.)

New York, Feb. 9.—Today makes the Taylor murder literally a nine days' wonder—not a feature but a serial.

Will the wonder end with a romantic explanation? Or will it be something merely sordid? What will be the fifteenth episode of the great film mystery? Will the nine days' stretch into the annals of the unsolved in crime history?

There are two hinged traits of inquiry. Either looks very promising and I suspect that before long someone, either well-known in the film world or well-known in the case will be connected with the mystery in the course, of following these trails. The trails may cross.

Let us try to motivate the Taylor murder. Murder is done for many reasons—for women, for money, for drink, for drugs. This case narrows down to the two trails—red hot romance and the hectic life of dope.

SERVANTS HOLD KEY.

The first trial is picked up in the sinister trial of sex anarchy thrown athwart the life up in the hills of Hollywood.

The solution of the mystery may not be locked up in the minds of the servants, but at least the key to it is hidden there. The servants—it hinges on the servants. Who knows more about the free and easy life of Hollywood than this underground local in the amalgamated order of gossip?

First of course comes to mind the missing butler-secretary, E. F. Sands, alias Fitz Strathmore, who is most likely to know what the world would like to know. In a sense had he not been the alter-ego of the murdered man?

At this point the trail opens on a broad vista. Who more likely to take advantage of what he was in such a close position to learn either by delving into the past or by prying into the present?

Over the head of someone the discovery of Sands dangles like the sword of Damocles.

Then there is Henry Peavey, the negro servant. He doth protest too much. Also some others are no mean protestants.

JEALOUSY HIGHLIGHT.

As an eleventh-hour witness comes Howard Fellows, chauffeur, brother of Assistant Director Harry Fellows. Somewhere in the strong box of his mind is a tiny fact that may help, if the bulls can only outguess the combination. Chauffeurs, with eyes glued to the road and ears stopped, see everything and hear much.

The most glittering fantasy in this maze of mystery is that greenish will-o'-the-whisp—jealousy.

The list of girls reads like an all-star cast for a series of super-features —Mabel Normand, Mary Miles Minter, Edna Purviance, Winifred Kingston, Neva Gerber, and many others.

BUNGALOW WHERE FAMOUS DIRECTOR WAS SLAIN

AUTHORITIES TRACE GUN USED TO KILL DIRECTOR IN MOVIE TRAGEDY

of the mystery in the office of District Attorney Thomas Lee Woolwine.

Every person known to be in possession of the slightest knowledge concerning the murdered film director, his life association or facts leading up to the crime, will be called before the district attorney's staff of deputies for a questioning that officers have characterized as "one of the most gruelling sort."

The ablest men in Woolwine's office were assigned to the case with instructions to leave nothing undone that may lead to a solution of the crime, regardless of the prominence of persons who may be investigated by the rigid investigation.

Film stars whose faces are familiar to millions of "movie" fans all over the civilized globe will be taken to the district attorney's office for questioning today or tomorrow. Persons prominent in other phases of motion picture work will also be seen by the investigators.

Among those selected to be questioned are Mabel Normand, Mary Miles Minter, Claire Windsor, Mrs. Douglas MacLean, Neva Gerber, Howard Fellows, Taylor's chauffeur, Henry Peavey, Taylor's valet, and a large number of others whose names have not yet been linked with any phase of the investigation.

"The blessed baby" letters written by Mabel Normand, famous screen comedienne, to the slain director, and missing since his death, were said today to be in the possession of the District Attorney.

Likewise a dainty lace-edged handkerchief bearing the initials "M. M. M."

The letters were said to have been found tucked away in an old shoe in a closet of the Alvarado street bungalow where Taylor was slain. The handkerchief was said to have been found by Henry Peavey, negro servant who had first told of its existence.

EASTERNER SUSPECTED.

Detectives were said today to have had a young Easterner, who was mentioned in an earlier investigation of the case, under the closest surveillance since late yesterday. It was stated investigators found wide discrepancies in a story he told earlier of his whereabouts on the night Taylor was shot down in his bungalow home.

The suspect is said to have been a close friend of a leading movie actress.

Investigators seeking the murderer of Taylor believed their search has been simplified by the discovery of the Mabel Normand letters. Detectives started out immediately on the new trail developed by the letter's contents.

Other developments today were:

1. Revelation that Mabel Normand exchanged telegrams with Taylor in an effort to patch up a disagreement while he was directing Mary Miles Minter in "Ann of "Green Gables" at Dedham, Mass.

2. Disclosure that the Department of Justice has been secretly investigating the murder in connection with the drug phase of the mystery.

3. Police hunt for a professional gunman of several aliases who disappeared from his haunts two hours before Taylor was slain.

4. Announcement that Mabel Normand and Mack Sennett, the famous producer, with whom she has a million-dollar contract, are both ill.

In connection with the finding of Miss Normand's correspondence, among the telegrams from the star to Taylor a number were believed to have been sent by the comedienne in Los Angeles in 1919, when Taylor was "on location" in Dedham, Mass., with one of the Famous Players producing units.

These telegrams were said to have been addressed to "Captain" Taylor. Taylor was known by a military title for some time after his discharge from the British army. The exchange of wires was said to have been an attempt to patch up a disagreement between them arising over the attentions one was bestowing on a third member of the picture colony.

Miss Normand was starring in "The Slim Princess," George Ade's picture, in 1919. It was made at the Goldwyn studios. Victor Schertzinger was Miss Normand's director. Taylor at the time was directing Mary Miles Minter in "Ann of Green Gables," made in Dedham.

LETTERS OF OTHERS.

It was understood today that attaches of the District Attorney's office were busily engaged in going through scores of letters and telegrams found in addition to the Normand letters.

The Normand letters, it was said, were of a minor portion of those found and it was possible that valuable clews would be developed through close scrutiny of these documents.

Searchers had about concluded their investigation of the murder bungalow when the bundle of letters and telegrams was accidentally found in the toe of a tall high top shoe worn by Taylor when "on location."

There was a great conjecture as to how these letters reached their hiding place. It was suggested that Taylor feared their theft and had hidden them there. Another theory was that they were hastily pinned there by some one after Taylor's death while still another theory was that they had been placed there after the owner or persons who took them at the time of Taylor's death had extracted desired documents.

TAYLOR SOUGHT FORTUNE IN KLONDIKE

Theatrical Man Tells of Early Wanderings of Slain Director

New York, Feb. 9.—How William D. Taylor expected to make a fortune in the Klondike was revealed by Harry Corson Clarke, actor, manager and world traveler, who arrived from California today. Mr. Clarke said:

"I first met Taylor in December, 1911, in San Francisco. He told me a story about a claim he and his brother Dennis had in Alaska which he believed would make them fabulously rich if they could develop it. Taylor, however, couldn't raise necessary funds, and as I was at that time taking a theatrical company to Honolulu I took him along. He played the leading parts with great success.

"Taylor was profoundly educated, a deep thinker and an omnivorous reader—a man with a mind. While I was with Taylor I never knew him to have anything to do with women. He was the finest gentleman that God ever made."

MABEL NORMAND BREAKS DOWN UNDER STRAIN

Unnerved by Persistent Cruelling of Investigators; Denies All Callers

Los Angeles, Feb. 9.—Mabel Normand is seriously ill at her residence here. The strain of the past few days has been too much for the movie star who has been in the limelight of the Taylor mystery.

According to her personal representative, Arch McArthur, her condition is so serious that she has denied herself to all callers.

Miss Normand's illness was announced following a report that her letters and telegrams, all of a personal nature, to Taylor, had been located by the authorities. But this report was vehemently denied today.

McArthur declared these letters, which have been the subject of a special investigation since their mysterious disappearance from the slain man's bungalow have not been returned to Miss Normand or her representatives.

"Miss Normand is very ill and has denied herself to all callers," said McArthur. "The persistent gruelling by investigators who seek to find an additional clue that might hint toward the apprehension of the murderer has been unnerving to her and has undermined her health considerably. I believe she has told the police everything she knows that might aid in clearing up the mystery."

Daughter to Claim Taylor's $20,000 Estate

Los Angeles, Feb. 9.—Public Administrator Frank Bryson has made a careful inventory of all of the effects and assets of William Desmond Taylor, he said today. As matters now stand, the total value of the estate which will go to Edith Daley Deane Tanner, the slain director's daughter, is about $20,000.

A telegram received by Bryson from Miss Tanner's attorney in New York indicates that she will not come to Los Angeles for some time because of her nervous condition. While it is believed there may be a sum to Taylor's account in a New York city bank, investigators have thus far failed to reveal it.

Further telegraphic inquiries regarding this account were going to New York during the day. All of Taylor's clothing, books, manuscripts, etc., have been placed in storage pending the settlement of the estate.

Hays Denies He Will Clean Up Hollywood

By International News Service.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 9.—Will H. Hays, new "Czar of the Movies," is not going to Los Angeles to "clean house" in the Hollywood film colony, he informed the International News Service today. Hays laughed when told of reports that he is contemplating a coast trip.

"I have absolutely no plans to go to California," said the Postmaster-General. "As a matter of fact, I am now under contract with the National Association of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors starts after March 4, and until that time I'm taking a rest, the first real one I've had in a long time."

P. B. OLNEY, BROTHER OF RICHARD OLNEY, DEAD

New York, Feb. 9.—Peter Butler Olney, for many years prominent in politics and law, died today at his home at Lawrence, Long Island, in the seventy-ninth year. He was once district attorney of New York. He was active in Tammany Hall years ago and later in the Democratic ranks outside the wigwam. He was counsel in the suits against the Tweed ring. He was born in Offord, Mass., and educated at Harvard. His brother, Richard Olney, was Secretary of State during President Cleveland's administration.

SHERIFF KELIHER SUED ON COSMOPOLITAN NOTE

Sheriff John A. Keliher of Suffolk county was sued for $14,000 and interest today in Superior Court by Bank Commissioner Allen, acting in the name of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company. The plaintiff declares that among the assets of the closed trust company was found a note for $4,000, signed by the sheriff on September 17, 1920, and payable in four months at 7 per cent.

The trust company was closed a week later. No part of the note has been satisfied, Commissioner Allen says.

MARRIED TO SPITE MOTHER, SAYS WIFE

"I did not love him, Judge. I married him to spite my mother," Della Dunn, 24 years old, made this statement in the Somerville Court today. She appeared before Judge Sturtevant to press a charge of non-support against her 21-year-old husband, Charles O. Dunn. They were married a year ago after a three weeks' courtship. They lived at No. 333 Summer street, Somerville. Dunn, who served overseas, said he had been unable to obtain employment.

The case was continued until February 18.

GIRL READY TO STATE CASE AGAINST GOVERNOR

New Orleans, Feb. 9.—If there is a legislative investigation of the charges brought against Governor Lee M. Russell of Mississippi by Miss Frances Birkhead, who has entered suit against the Governor for $160,000 on a charge of seduction, she will be willing to testify against him, she said in a statement to a local newspaper.

TAYLOR'S VALET ONCE LIVED IN BOSTON

Edward F. Sands, former valet of William Desmond Taylor, slain California film director, now sought as a suspect in connection with the murder on the night of February 1 at Hollywood, lived on St. Botolph street, Boston, at one time.

This is the belief of police officials and others investigating the case, who have found that Sands, who served with the United States navy and later deserted, gave his address when he last enlisted as "No. 184 St. Botolph street, Boston."

Investigation reveals that there is no house numbered 184 on St. Botolph street. A tour of houses on the street did bring to light a certain place where service men, and particularly those of the navy, occupied living quarters before and during the World War.

Persons now living in that house, however, were unable to identify Sands' picture or any of the numerous aliases he is alleged to have gone under during his eventful career.

A search of records in the Navy Department at Washington reveals that a man known as Edward Fitzgerald Snyder, alias Edward Fitzwilliams Strathmore, enlisted in the navy in 1911 at Cincinnati. His description tallies with that of Sands, Desmond's former valet.

At the time of his last enlistment he gave the St. Botolph street address and his next of kin as an uncle, "Henry William Fitzwilliams Keats, Lincolnshire, England. When he enlisted under the name of Snyder in 1911, he gave his next of kin as his father, "Murray T. Snyder, No. 572 Silver street, Marion, O."

He was known as "Strathmore" in 1915 and was court-martialed under this name on charges of fraud and embezzlement and sentenced to a year in the Portsmouth, N. H., naval prison. Subsequent enlistments, the Navy Department stated, were fraudulent.

SALARY INCREASE IN BROOKLINE IS OPPOSED

Recommendations for salary increases for certain executive heads and department employes of the Brookline town government are being strenuously opposed because of recent cuts imposed on other town employes, it was reported today. Increases, which run from $180 to $700 a year, are recommended in the face of a cut of 25 cents a day in the pay of town laborers, which took effect on January 1, when it was intimated another cut would be made about April 1.

CALLS SOME HARVARD MEN "SNEAKS, CHEATS"

Harvard's librarian, W. C. Lane, calls a certain number of Harvard men who make use of the University Library sneaks and cheats. Books are taken either under the recipient's name or under another person's and are not returned. Mr. Lane says it creates little satisfaction to publish the names of these men as has been suggested.

DENIES PLOT OF PRODUCERS TO 'COVER UP'

New York, Feb. 9.—"It's a lot of rot," said Lewis J. Selznick, head of the Selznick Film Company, today, commenting on dispatches from Los Angeles on charges that money is being used by the big film producers to hush up the Taylor scandal and to prevent an investigation.

"My company is not involved in the Taylor case, but I don't believe these charges true in the case of any producer with interests in Hollywood.

"The Association of Producers which has engaged Postmaster-General Will Hays obtained his service for the very purpose of helping clean up matters like the Taylor case.

"It is to the interest of every producer in the moving picture industry to help the authorities clear it up and not handicap them in their investigation.

"If there are undesirables in the Hollywood colony, the producers are as anxious as any one to get rid of them and clean up the colony. It hurts the business to have undesirables in it, so it is ridiculous to charge that money is being spent to hush up the Taylor scandal.

"If the movie business needs cleaning up the producers will do it themselves. They must do it to protect their own interests."

Adolph Zukor, head of the Famous Players Company, is on his way to Los Angeles to take a hand in an investigation of the Taylor case, it was learned today.

Members of the New York staff were inclined to be uncommunicative about the reasons for his departure. He may have an announcement to make after a conference with Jesse Lasky, it was stated.

28 HATS, U. S. MAKE, ARE SOLD FOR $2,800

New York, Feb. 9.—Paris, France, and father's pocketbook both received severe shocks at the retail millinery Spring fashion show. Dad and Rue De La Paix will read the news today with the same feeling of alarm. Twenty-eight American-made hats sold for $2,800. Millinery declares it proves New York can create models as well as Paris. Father opines that Paris which wholesale at a hundred each may cost most anything by the time they reach his family's hat boxes.

EASE UP ON WHISKEY TO FIGHT INFLUENZA

Dispatches from Washington indicate Federal authorities will lift restrictions on whiskey permits in event of an influenza epidemic. Prohibition Commissioner Haynes and Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair ordered prohibition directors throughout the country to co-operate with physicians and druggists so that prescriptions may be issued promptly. The action was taken despite opposition by Anti-Saloon League heads.

GIRL RAFFLES TOO ILL TO GO TO COURT

Woman Who Confessed to Thefts at Colleges May Have Pneumonia

"Mabel Norris," mysterious girl thief, who has confessed to many new thefts at girls' schools and colleges, was taken to the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital today.

She is threatened with pneumonia.

Miss Norris was arrested in the exclusive Choate Girls' School in Brookline. She was to have been arraigned in the Brookline police court today, but was found to be suffering from a severe cold.

Dr. Francis J. McMahon of Washington street, Brookline, was called to her cell. He ordered her removal to a hospital.

The court case was continued until tomorrow and will probably be further continued if the girl's health does not improve.

SERVED TWO YEARS.

Miss Norris was sent to Sherborn Reformatory two years ago for a series of thefts similar to those of which she is now accused.

Miss Norris has admitted making raids at Wellesley, Simmons, Radcliffe, Maryclifte Academy, Boston University, and other fashionable girl's institutions.

The young woman, who declares that she will not give her real name because she wants to shield her family, confessed, the Brookline police said, to stealing the brief case of Catherine Kundsen at the Boston University College of Secretarial Science and also to a series of petty larcenies at that college.

With the stolen brief case in her hand, she entered the Choate School, a fashionable, private institution on Beacon street, asking to see a girl, later found not to be registered in the school. The indefinite questions and prowling glances aroused the suspicions of the students, who immediately informed the head of the school. She asked to speak to "Miss Norris."

In the privacy of Miss Choate's office Miss "Norris" posed as a student of the Boston University College of Secretarial Science. She referred to Dean T. Lawrence Davis of Boston University for identification, who denies all knowledge of the girl.

AROUSED SUSPICION.

Miss "Norris" had sufficient nerve to ask: "Dean Davis, surely, you know me?"

"Why, no, I don't know you," answered Dean Davis.

Upon the entrance of the police, the girl, attractive in appearance and displaying a refinement difficult to associate with her present situation, broke down and confessed to the thefts of clothing, jewelry, money from girl students at Greater Boston schools and colleges. She also admitted forging. She could give no reason for stealing.

Her eyes are brown and her hair is black. In 1918 she graduated from one of the best-known seminaries in New England, and in 1919 she was a student at the New England Conservatory of Music.

MILLION SEES ERA OF GREAT PROSPERITY AHEAD

Mellon addorsed the suggestion recently made by Secretary Hoover that some method be worked out giving government backing to railroad securities in order to make them more attractive to the investment world.

SURROUND LYNN MANSION TO GET VARNEY

Son of Patent Medicine Man Arrested for Non-Support of Wife and Child

Deputy Chief Callaghan, two sergeants and ten patrolmen surrounded the mansion at No. 25 Hamilton avenue, Lynn, today and arrested William H. Varney, forty years old, son of the proprietor of a patent medicine company, charged with non-support of his wife and minor child.

The police have been seeking Varney for a year in various parts of New England. Several times he has eluded them just as they were prepared to take him. This time they decided to surround his mother's home to make sure he did not escape them after they had received information Varney had just returned to Lynn.

Varney's wife and child live in another part of Lynn. He acquired notoriety three years ago when he and his father differed as to the disposition of the profits of the medicine company. After many months of litigation an agreement was reached.

Varney made no resistance when the police entered the house. He was taken to the Lynn police station and was to be arraigned in court later.

Fresh From Paris

Latest Word From Marie Suzanne

PARIS, France.

A TAILLEUR that has the seal of Spring, 1922, set unmistakably upon it is of heavily-ribbed silk jersey in the popular dove gray tone. Color stripes of rust and yellow is introduced in the panel of self material set in the front of the coat, and the matching collar, cuffs and girdle, and sections of the material upon which is appliqued row after row of dove gray cire braid trim the sides of the coat and the lower part of the sleeves. The skirt has a tunic as long as itself and slightly more full.

CUT on Russian peasant lines and having its neck banded with metal braid and its front of bodice braided and besprinkled with tiny metal rings, a dress from Poiret insinuates itself into our good graces. The maroon colored satin bodice has wide cuffs of gray crepe to match the skirt, and the girdle is a twisted maroon silk cord, tasseled in silver. This model is decidedly full as to skirt, with the fulness concentrated over the hips.

RAIN OR SNOW AND SLUSH FOR BOSTON

More slushy weather is probably in store for Boston and vicinity, according to the weather forecast today, which predicts unsettled weather, probably with rain or snow, tonight and Friday, somewhat warmer temperatures, and fresh southwest to west winds. Temperatures are expected to hover around 25 or 30 tomorrow. Unsettled weather prevails over most of the country today, and it was warmer. The coldest in New England at 8 o'clock today was zero at Greenville, Me., and the warmest was 27 at Boston.

1,000 WILL LEAVE JOBS AT FORE RIVER YARD

Orders to Stop Work Expected and Men Will Be Discharged at Once

Announcement from Washington that the government intends stopping work on fourteen warships under construction will hit the big Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Ship Building Corporation hard, said S. Wiley Wakeman, general manager of that plant, today.

Wakeman said that he had not received official information from Washington regarding the work on the big battle cruiser, Lexington, now approximately 15 per cent. completed at the Fore River yard, but added that he expected to hear within a day or two.

The uncompleted battleship Massachusetts also was under construction at the yard until about nine months ago when orders were received to halt the work until further instructions.

The plant, asserted Wakeman, is now employing approximately 2,800 workers, and if the work on the Lexington is halted or abandoned, 1,000 of these will have to be allowed to go immediately and possibly more later.

Wakeman said that the plant was in splendid shape for constructing merchant ships and doing high grade repair work, but contracts are coming in slowly.

The work on the six submarines now being constructed at the yard probably will continue without interruption, he added, as will the repair work on merchant ships now there. This will give employment for about 1,500 men.

CANOPIC HAS COME HERE FOR LAST TIME

Boston Harbor has seen the last of the White Star liner Canopic. For nearly a quarter of a century this vessel has been plying regularly between Boston and ports in Europe, most of the time to inland ports and the Mediterranean. A conservative estimate of the number of immigrants she has brought to these shores would be well over a quarter of a million. The 3 per cent. immigration act and the efforts of the Italian government to foster Italian immigration in its own ships have made it unprofitable to continue operating the Boston-Mediterranean service and the Canopic will ply between Montreal and Loverpool in the White Star-Dominion service.

IT WAS LUCKY DAY FOR LITTLE ARTHUR

The surgeons at the Haymarket Square Relief Station got the surprise of their lives today when Arthur Parker of Revere was brought in after being knocked down by an automobile almost in front of the hospital doors. Arthur, who is eight, was screaming with pain. In a jiffy the surgeons were looking for broken bones. They found one—it was the bone in Arthur's second toe on his left foot. How that toe was broken, inside a stout shoe, and without injury to the other parts of the foot, is a mystery to the doctors.

COMMERCE MEN FIGHT DAYLIGHT SAVING REPEAL

Representative Business Men and Department Store Heads Oppose Change

Representatives of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and other chambers throughout Massachusetts, industrial plants, department stores, health organizations, athletic clubs and employers of labor, appeared before the legislative Committee on Legal Affairs in opposition to the repeal of the daylight saving law.

Claude L. Allen, attorney for the Boston Chamber of Commerce, was in charge of the case for those opposed to the repeal. Walter Powers, chairman of the chamber's daylight saving committee, declared an extra hour in the evening gave workers an opportunity for fresh air and recreation.

Some of the other opponents of the repeal were: George R. Farrington, vice-president of the Boston Stock Exchange; Fred H. Tilton, representing the Massachusetts State Chamber of Commerce; Robert V. Spencer, secretary of the Massachusetts Typothetæ's League; George V. Barnes, of the New Haven Railroad; Claude Davison, president of the Boston Twilight Baseball League; J. W. Bartlett, city solicitor of Newton; employes of C. F. Hovey & Co., Gilchrist, Chandler & S. S. Pierce, Dennison Manufacturing Company and several textile mills.

PAY RAISES URGED FOR BROOKLINE OFFICIALS

Increases in salary from $100 to $700 are recommended for executive heads of departments and other employes of the town of Brookline, in the appropriation for 1922, which are now before the Brookline Committee of Thirty, who will make their report and recommendations to the town meeting within several weeks. Criticism has been made of the increases, because only recently the town laborers were given a cut of twenty-five cents a day in their pay, and it was stated that a similar cut would take effect April, 1. This was recommended by the heads of departments and in which the selectmen concurred.

RAILWAY CLERKS TO FIGHT WAGE REDUCTIONS

Plan Huge Protest Against Wage Cut Awarded by Judge Landis

Chicago, Feb. 9 (By International News Service).—A gigantic boycott of professional baseball is planned for the coming season, it became known today.

The boycott will be in protest of Judge Kenesaw M. Landis' action in the Chicago Building Trades' Council wage award.

More than a million union men in the United States will participate in the boycott, it was said.

"Oust Landis as baseball chief or bust professional baseball," is declared to be the union slogan, according to a high union official.

"Everything is set," this official declared. "The boycott will be nation wide, affecting every city where major leagues play. It has been taken up by union organizations in every nook and corner of the land.

"Union man everywhere feel that Landis did not give the working man a square deal."

DICKERMAN IN WILD DRINKING BOUTS IN PARIS

Young Husband and Another Witness Tell of Revels in Two Cities

Night life in Paris during the war, when the wine flowed free, and there were drinking bouts with taxi rides and fervent love notes, was described today by Robert Eliot Dickerman, testifying in the East Cambridge Superior Court in the $100,000 alienation suit of his wife, Eugenie Young Dickerman, against his mother Mrs. Minnie L. Dickerman.

Dickerman said he did not recognize as his former Sunday school teacher the women, a score or so years older than he, who afterwards became his wife, but that she recalled the fact to him.

"I drank practically every time I was with her," young Dickerman testified. "We visited cafes and theatres and I called at her room two or three times a week. Once we drank all the afternoon. She sent for me to come to her hotel when I was in a drinking bout with some American officers.

"I imitated a lot of her phrases when I replied to her love notes. I received many of these letters, but I destroyed them before I came home."

PLENTY OF LIQUOR.

Mrs. Dickerman told many persons that she was Mrs. Dickerman's common law wife in France, a New York witness testified. "When Robert is in liquor I can do anything with him," Mrs. Dickerman declared, according to this witness.

Revels near Greenwich Village, at which there was always plenty of liquor and at which Mrs. Dickerman was hostess and Mrs. Elizabeth Pillsbury, divorced wife of former Attorney-General Albert E. Pillsbury, a guest, were described by Chester L. Wyman of No. 318 West 57th street, New York.

Wyman was followed on the stand by Robert Eliot Dickerman, husband of the plaintiff.

Frank E. Dickerman, a Boston corporation lawyer, described his first meeting with his son's wife. He testified that his daughter-in-law had visited his office and said: "I think Robert is engaged to a girl named Hill and his love for me has grown cold."

She also recounted many of her husband's escapades in France and in this country, the witness declared.

Frank E. Dickerman, father of young Dickerman, testified:

"A man came into my office and told me Robert had been married. He asked me if I would see the plaintiff that afternoon."

"OWED FOR JAIL DOOR."

Q.—What did she say? A.—She said she had met Robert in Paris. He had been drinking when she first met him. She told me Robert owed a debt in Kewanee, Ill. She told me he had broken a jail door down there and said he still owed for the cell door. She said she had been doing war work with Robert while in Paris.

Q.—When she came to your office, did she say Robert was drunk in Paris, and had a row with superior officers, and received a reprimand? A.—Yes.

Q.—At any time did she mention the Park Avenue Hotel, New York? A.—Yes. She said she found Robert drunk at that hotel, she took him in a taxi to her sister's home, Mrs. Rue B. Darling.

Q.—Did she give any reason for thinking Robert's love was taken away from her? A.—Yes. She said, "I think Robert is engaged to a girl named Hill and his love for me has gone cold."

Q.—What else did she say about Robert's drinking in Paris? A.—She said she had smoked and drank with him.

Chester L. Wyman of No. 318 West Fifty-seventh street, New York, testified:

Q.—Did you meet Mrs. Eugenie Dickerman? A.—Yes.

Q.—When and where? A.—At her apartment in New York sometime in April or May, 1920.

Q.—Did you see her after that? A.—Yes, in the same apartment.

"WANTED A QUART."

Q.—State what was said. A.—She said she would like to get a quart of liquor as Robert was coming over. She said when under the influence of liquor she could do anything with him.

Q.—Who else was there? A.—Mrs. Betty Dillsbury, Chester LaBosch, and a woman named Jane.

Q.—How often was liquor served? A.—Practically every time I went there.

Q.—Who served it? A.—Mrs. Young usually.

Q.—Did you go there two weeks later and who was there? A.—A party of five or six.

Q.—Whose guest were you? A.—Chester LaBosch's. He was rooming there.

Q.—At this party you had there who was present? A.—Chester LaBosch, Mrs. Young, Mrs. Pillsbury, Jane, James Ryan and myself.

Q.—Was Robert there? A.—No, he was in Boston.

Q.—To whom did Mrs. Young say she was Robert's common law wife in France? A.—To all of us when she related experiences in France.

Q.—During the party at Mrs. Young's apartment, who made the suggestion to go out and get liquor? A.—Mrs. Young.

MRS. DICKERMAN, SR., ILL.

Robert Eliot Dickerman, the youthful husband, then testified. As he was about to go on the stand, his mother left the room, and her attorney, Elbridge Anderson, announced that she was ill, and would like to be excused.

Q.—Previous to going to France did you know Mrs. Young? A.—No, I never did.

Q.—What were your relations with her? A.—Very intimate.

Q.—What do you mean by that, Mr. Dickerman? A.—I mean that I was very intimate.

Dickerman said he went to cafes and theatres with her.

Q.—Did you drink while you were in France? A.—A little.

Q.—What would you say as to your drinking after you met Mrs. Young? A.—I drank practically every time I was with her.

Q.—Were you ever under the influence of liquor? A.—Frequently.

Q.—Was this while you were with her? A.—Yes, on several occasions.

STUDENTS STAGE OVATION FOR O'CONNELL

Cardinal's Late Arrival in Rome Causes Many Expressions of Regret

By Universal Service.

Rome, Feb. 9.—Cardinal O'Connell is being received everywhere with a continuation of the ovation given him at the American college.

The Carneval went to the American college to confer with Vice-Rector Burke. When he appeared the students renewed the ovation and if it had not been for the respect for his rank they would have cheered him.

The Cardinal then called on several of his colleagues in the sacred college. He was met everywhere with a hearty welcome and with expressions of regret that he had not arrived in time to participate in the conclave.

HUNDREDS OF MESSAGES.

Cardinal O'Connell, assisted by Secretary Haberlin, answered hundreds of letters and telegrams. He received many messages from humble Italians who formerly lived in Boston, and who have returned to Italy, expressing their regret that he was unable to be present at the election of the Pope.

It was stated that Roman Cardinals and prelates assured Cardinal O'Connell that the conclave anxiously hoped for the arrival of the American Cardinals.

Cardinal Dougherty was expected to arrive today. He will stay at the American College. Cardinal Begin will stay at the Canadian College. They will immediately proceed to the Vatican to perform the ceremony of adoration of the new Pope.

THANK POPE FOR PRAYER.

Five hungred thousand Italian widows, mothers and sisters, bereaved in the World War, have addressed a congratulatory telegram to the Pope, especially thanking him for the first solemn blessing on Rome and Italy, and his prayer for peace for the whole world.

It is declared that the Pope, moved to tears by the message, dictated a cordial telegram through Cardinal Gaspari, to the National Association of War Widows, Mothers and Orphans. It is said that the new Pope has created an excellent impression throughout the country which will contribute to the eventual conciliation between Church and State.

Militarism Is Dead in Germany, Says Dr. F. E. Clark

Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, who has just reached Germany on his European tour, said in a cablegram received today:

"Militarism seems dead. I have seen scarcely a single soldier in cities that used to swarm with them. The desire of the common people is only for peace, and war is loathed. All are grateful to America for feeding their children.

"The need now is for clothing rather than food."

ASKS BOARD TO SETTLE RHODE ISLAND STRIKE

Governor Acts as Workers Attempt to Storm Plant in Cranston

By Associated Press

Providence, R. I., Feb. 9.—Governor Sam Soul today sent a request to the State Labor Board that it appoint at once a board of mediation and conciliation to try to effect a settlement of the strike of approximately 12,000 operatives in cotton mills throughout the State.

Early today several truckloads of strikers from the Pawtuxet Valley went to the plant of he Imperial Finishing Company in Cranston and attempted to storm the company's gates.

The chief police with a squad of twenty mounted police armed with rifles drove them away. No damage was done to the plant.

A demonstration by strikers at the Interlaken Print Works at Arkwright resulted in the management closing down the plant this morning. It had been running with a much depleted force.

MONTEUX AGAIN HEADS BOSTON SYMPHONY

Present Conductor Reappointed by the Trustees for Two More Years

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today settled the question as to the conductorship of the orchestra after this season by reappointing Pierre Monteux, the present conductor, for two years more.

PIERRE MONTEUX

Monteux has been conductor of the orchestra since 1919. He succeeded Henri Rabaud at the Paris Opera, who took charge of the band following the unpleasantness during which Dr. Muck was deposed.

Monteux was a well known French conductor at that time. He had come to America with the Diaghileff Russian Ballet and the following season had become the French conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Company. The directors of the Boston Opera were assisted in securing both Rabaud and Monteux by the French high commission, then in Washington.

As Rabaud was delayed in reaching America, the Metropolitan Opera allowed Monteux to take a month's leave of absence and conduct the Boston Symphony. After one season in Boston, Rabaud returned to France and Monteux was engaged as regular conductor.

During his first two seasons Monteux was criticized for his interpretation of the symphonic works. In New York and other cities which the orchestra visits he has been violently attacked by the critics. However, at the end of his first year the trustees engaged him for two seasons more, and now that this period had expired he has been continued in office for another two years.

"DISH WATER" WAS 15 PER CENT. ALCOHOL

The West End police today raided a paper box factory on Lancaster street, near the North Station, and seized not only sixteen and a half gallons of whiskey, but the water in the sink where glasses are said to be washed after patrons have a drink. The sink water assayed sixteen per cent alcohol when analyzed by the chemist. The whiskey seized was labeled "Pure Rye Blend," and was hidden in paper boxes. Albert Cobbs, Patrick Colbert and Joseph Gorman, arrested in the raid, were fined $100 each and sentenced to three months in prison when arraigned in the Municipal Court. They appealed.

SETTLE THEFT CASE AGAINST GIRL CASHIER

Former Employe of Roxbury Grocers Baking Company Makes Restitution

The case against Anna N. Chambers, twenty-three years old, bakery cashier, charged with the larceny of $158, was settled today.

Following a conference in the judge's lobby of Roxbury Court between Judge Hayden, Attorney Robert J. Crowley, the girl's lawyer, and Attorney Lewis H. Peters, representing the Grocers Baking Company of Roxbury, Judge Hayden said:

"Miss Chambers has made restitution, so I agreed at the request of to five.

both attorneys to dismiss the complaint."

Miss Chambers lives at No. 53 Hinckley street, Somerville.

She was arrested January 26 after an audit of the company's books showed irregularities. The following day in Roxbury Court she pleaded not guilty.

Outside the courthouse she was guarded by five young men who attempted to "mob" the girl. Police were summoned and the mob ran.

HARDING GIVES APPROVAL TO OIL INQUIRY

Indicates That Probe of Mexican Intrigue Would Be Welcomed

By Universal Service.

Washington, Feb. 9.—A letter from President Harding approving an investigation by Congress of the oil plots of American interests, was learned to be in existence. A resolution was introduced in the House by Representative Ryan of New York, asking for recognition of the Obregon government. Three were the two latest developments in connection with the oil scandal.

A third disclosure, indicative of disrupted morale on the part of powerful interests involved in Mexican intrigues, was that representatives of the oil group had retained one of the most widely known attorneys in America. This lawyer is reputed to be close to the Republican group now dictating party affairs.

The President's letter was received by Representative Campbell, chairman of the rules committee of the House. In it the President states that a congressional investigation would be "desirable."

FAVORS FULL EXPOSE.

It was revealed that Chairman Campbell, to whose committee the Connally resolution calling for a full investigation of the oil scandal was referred, had seen the President. It is understood they asked if such an investigation would interfere with any negotiations now pending and looking toward recognition of the Obregon government.

The letter indicates that such an investigation not only would not interfere with any negotiations, but that it would be welcomed. It was further inferred in the letter that it would be acceptable that Congress should be placed in such a light as not to appear to be cloaking any facts that might prove embarrassing in certain quarters.

With the White House welcoming such an investigation as proposed, where does the responsibility for delay rest? Chairman Campbell takes the stand that it is a diplomatic matter, despite the fact that agents of the latter, including Secretary Hughes, under-Secretary Fletcher, Secretary Fall, Attorney-General Daugherty and many others in high office, to further their own ends.

URGES RECOGNITION.

The attitude of the White House would seem to indicate that the administration wants this misuse of names fully exposed before Congress.

The attitude of the chairman of the Rules Committee in referring the Connally resolution to the State Department does not appear to coincide with administrative statements.

The Ryan resolution differs from the Connally resolution in one principal respect. The Connally resolution asked for full and complete investigation of the machinations of the oil interests in fomenting revolutions on American soil against the Obregon government and for action to establish an exchange of diplomatic and consular service.

So convenient and effective for sore throat

With gargles or sprays it is impossible to keep a sore throat under anything like continuous treatment. With Formamint, it makes no difference where you are—at work, in crowded car, shop, theatre or church—you can dissolve one of these delicious, almost candy-like tablets in your mouth once an hour or so. An effective yet harmless antiseptic is released and, carried by the saliva, continuously bathes the entire lining of the mouth and throat, checks germ growth, and gives the sore, infected tissues chance to heal.

Formamint Tablets used when especially exposed to infection reduce your danger of catching sore throats, and even influenza, from others.

Children can—and should—use them freely, as defence against throat affections and influenza which spread so readily in congested school-rooms.

Recommended by those specialists, physicians, dentists and druggists.

2 WOMEN HELD UP BY BANDITS IN UNIFORM

Cambridge Police Seek Trio Who Snatched Handbags and Make Escape

Cambridge police were today searching for bandits, wearing army uniforms, who attacked and held up two women in lonely places of that city.

Miss Annie Hurd of Kinnard street, Cambridge, was on her way home when three men leaped at her and snatched the handbag she was carrying.

Miss Hurd grappled with her assailants, clinging to one of them for a time, despite his efforts to beat her off.

The man finally succeeded in escaping the woman's clutch and fled into the dark with his two companions.

The attack took place near Lawrence and Pearl streets. There was $1.60 in the handbag.

The description given the police by Miss Hurd of the man in the uniform coat tallied closely with that supplied by Miss Alfreda Harris, eighteen years old, of No. 24 Kenwood street, Cambridge, of three men who attacked her on Massachusetts avenue.

Miss Harris was passing the corner of a fence when the men jumped at her, snatched away her handbag containing a $1 bill, and fled. She pursued, but lost them.

ASK RECEIVER FOR COLUMBIA GRAPHOPHONE

Insolvency Alleged by Stockholders Who Begin Action in Delaware

By Associated Press.

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 9.—Application for a receivership for the Columbia Graphophone Manufacturing Company, a Delaware corporation, was made today in the United States District Court. Insolvency is alleged.

The application was made by the Universal Securities Company, owner of 1,000 shares of common stock; May B. Shera, owner of 226 shares; Henry W. Runyon, 275 shares, all of Jersey City.

A rule to show cause was made returnable February 17 by Judge Morris.

$19,900,000 LIABILITIES.

The amount of the liabilities is put at $19,900,000 to banks and financial creditors, in addition to $3,000,000 to merchandise and other creditors. No listing of assets is made, but the inference of the analysis of the company's affairs is that they are small.

The general affidavit charges that the increase in the business of the defendant at no time has been proportionate to the enlargements of the capital stock and the making of loans and that since the middle of 1920 this has been steadily decreasing.

This is reflected in the price of the stock in the open market, which has declined from $75, two years ago, to $1.35 last month. There are stated to be outstanding 9,833,731 shares of preferred stock on $100 par value and 1,368,286 shares of common stock of no par value.

COMPANY'S BUSINESS.

Besides a plant at Bridgeport, Ct., there is another at East Baltimore, on which $3,500,000 has been expended, which is not now in use, and another in Toronto, Canada, costing $1,500,000, also not in use. A least for eight years of eight floors of the Gotham National Bank Building, New York city, carries an aggregate rental of $1,000,000.

Sales for the nine months preceding September 30, 1921, were $19,000,000, as against $47,000,000 for the similar period ending September 30, 1920.

Profits for the 1920 period are stated to have been $7,803,724, while a loss of $5,339,775 was incurred in the 1921 period, and the company is stated to be confronted with other losses by reason of outstanding contracts for supplies.

The insolvency of the company is shown by its inability to pay the interest on its debts, the complainants claimed.

The general financial depression is held responsible in part for the present position of the company, added to which is depreciation of its inventory.

Receivership Move May Not Affect Columbia Plant

Bridgeport, Ct., Feb. 9.—Robert F. Crudginton, general manager of the Columbia Graphophone Company, when informed of the receivership proceedings at Wilmington, Del., said that if such a receivership was granted it probably would not interfere with operation of the plant here.

Two thousand employes now are at work, 85 per cent. of the normal force, Mr. Crudginton said. He added that there had been a general improvement noted in orders for some time, and that the January orders exceeded considerably those of any month for more than a year back.

57 NEW CASES OF INFLUENZA REPORTED

Health Board Calls for Caution for Hotels and Restaurants

With fifty-seven new cases of influenza reported within the last twenty hours, with ten new cases of lobar pneumonia, the Board of Health renewed appeals to the public to increase its care and to restaurant, hotel, cafetarias, bakeshops and similar places to redouble their precautions against spreading the disease.

The new cases reported brings the total of influenza cases to 455 since the first of the year. It was a drop of nine cases from the figures of the day before. No deaths were reported.

Ten new pneumonia cases and two deaths were reported for the same period. This brings the total from January 1 up to 323 cases and 60 deaths. It also shows an increase of one case and two deaths over the day before.

All glasses, cups, spoons, etc., that are handled by and go to the mouths of those who eat or drink, must be sterilized. Pies, cakes and bread must be covered, according to law.

The circular asserts that persons may spread influenza and other diseases without showing evidence of being ill and suggests by such methods of cleanliness and of protection of foodstuffs it will do much to stop the spread of the disease.

The co-operation of the general public in the campaign is also urged.

Phillips Andover Sports Halted by Quarantine

Andover, Mass., Feb. 9.—All sports at Phillips Andover Academy were ordered suspended today as the result of a minor epidemic of grippe and colds among the students. Dr. Pierson Page, physical director and medical adviser, said that only a few of the sixty or more students affected were seriously ill and that the action was taken as a precautionary measure. He thought the quarantine would be lifted in a week. Classes are not affected.

The order cancels a hockey match scheduled for today against the Harvard second team and the events of Andover Day at Yale Saturday.

FLOOD SQ. ASSOCIATES TO HOLD DANCE TONIGHT

The fourth annual dance of the Flood Square Associates will be held in the Municipal Building, South Boston, this evening. A large array of local talent will entertain the guests between dances and during intermission.

Dances conducted by this popular organization have always been well attended, but the crowd tonight is expected to be a record breaker.

STATE WARDENS BLAME RAILROADS FOR FIRES

Worcester, Feb. 9.—State Fire Warden M. C. Hutchins and State Commissioner of Conservation William A. L. Barclay attacked the heads of the Boston & Albany and the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroads for failure to co-operate with State officials in preventing forest fires. The roads were blamed by the State officials for starting fires at a conference of the Worcester county fire wardens.

Autoist Freed

Woonsocket, R. I., Feb. 9.—William C. Bradley, arrested by the State police, charged with manslaughter as the outcome of an automobile accident January 7, in which Thomas H. BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY

Smart Set Continues Work for Disabled Veterans

By BETTY ALDEN

HELPING the disabled war veterans never fails to interest Boston 'a society matrons, even the busiest of them. Despite the slowness of the government in registering a little action where wounded ex-service men are concerned, there are still a number of people who have not forgotten what these boys have sacrificed—and remembering, are doing their utmost to make things as pleasant as possible for them.

All of which accounts for the numerous entertainments arranged by society and theatrical people this Winter, when the "boys"—many of them from the Parker Hill Hospital—came as guests. And the people who have done for these wounded men feel that the most they have done is the least they could have done. Their only desire is to do more.

Not long ago the Red Cross held its $100,000 drive, every cent of which was to be spent for the Home Service department of the Red Cross. The Home Service furnished every possible aid to disabled veterans, medical attendance, legal advice and financial aid when necessary. Prominent business men are members of the committee in charge, while well-known matrons of the social world are turning the best of their efforts to this work.

Of the matrons who have given their aid for the disabled men is Mrs. William A. Bunting. The list of Mrs. Bunting's fellow helpers is too long to be printed here, and many of them I have enumerated in this column before—it is heartening to know that there are people who still remember what these disabled men did.

The Woman's Cosmopolitan Club of Boston is to hold a Valentine's party next Tuesday evening at the New England's Women's Club at No. 585 Boylston street.

This organization had its inception during the war, when so many American-born women were working hand in hand with women of foreign birth for the Red Cross, Liberty Loans and other patriotic causes. The purpose of the club is to bring these women who have come here from distant countries into closer touch with the women who call America their native country. At present the club has a membership of over 300.

Among the women interested in carrying on the ideals and work of the Cosmopolitan Club are some of the most prominent figures in Boston's social world. Its honorary president is Mrs. Barrett Wendell of Marlboro street; the president is Mrs. Sidney Hoomer of Bay State road; Miss Annie Prescott Weeks is secretary, and Mrs. Sigrid MacGraw of Brookline is treasurer; Miss Rose Dexter of Beacon street, whose name is constantly linked with worthy causes, holds the office of chairman of the entertainment committee, while Mr. James Purdon of Milton is in charge of the publicity.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, by the way, numbers among the club's most interested members, which is, of course, rather natural, for Mrs. Thayer has proved herself to have no end of interest in work of this kind.

At the party next Tuesday evening, the Misses Eleanor Flower and Dorothy W. Fiske of Emerson College will entertain with the guitar, singing and readings.

Mrs. Augustus Thorndike, Jr. (Olivia Lowell), and Miss Mary H. Burr are the authors of the play which the committee of the Vincent Club has accepted for the annual show to be this Spring. The title has not yet been decided and will be announced later. More than a half dozen manuscrips were submitted.

Doubtless the male contingent of the smart set will be glad to hear that mere man will be admitted to the show, for it has been only in recent years that the committee has permitted this.

At the meeting held recently at the home of Mrs. Sewell H. Feesenden, the following members were elected: Misses Ellen Greenough, Alice Onderdonk, Theresa Winsor, Katherine Taylor, Priscilla Pollard, Edith Sturgis, Betty Russell, Mary Chute, Dorothy Brewer, Eleanor Musgrave, Jane Grew, Lucy Flake, Jeannie Dupee, Amy Lee and Esther Baker. Of this group, all but one or two are debutantes of this season. Miss Baker made her debut last year.

Apropos of Miss Grew, who is included in this list of newly-elected members, a dance will be given tonight in her honor by her aunt, Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, at the latter's home on Beacon street. Miss Grew is the daughter of the Edward Willgesworth Grews of Marlboro street.

Random Notes of Society Folk in Town and Country

MISS LOUISA HOAR of Boston, who attended Brigadier-General and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's dinner and bal poudre in New York, has returned to Washington, where she is visiting her mother, Mrs. Frederick Gillett, wife of Speaker of the House. Mrs. Gillett's elder daughter, Mrs. Reginald S. Foster (Frances Hoar), has concluded her visit at the Capital with her mother, and has returned to Boston. Both young women have been prominent as dancers in the shows given by the Vincent Club.

Mrs. Charles L. Harding of Boston, who is Wintering at her Palm Beach villa, was among the guests of Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte of New York, who entertained her company at tea in the Cocoanut Grove. Other guests were Mrs. Alfred Codman, James B. Sturges, Oliver Turner and Joseph B. Kennedy.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Frederick Gillett, both formerly of Boston, were "at home" yesterday afternoon, as were most of the Cabinet hostesses.

Mrs. John S. Lawrence of Boston is in New York, where she is stopping at the Ritz-Carlton.

WANTS JUDGES ELECTED BY PEOPLE

"Life Tenure Makes Them Autocratic and Lazy," Declares Shanley

tic and lazy," said Attorney Edward M. Shanley of Boston in favoring the bill lof Senator John J. Carey for popular election of judges. He pointed out that legislators and executive officers are elected and said judges should be.

"All appointments of judges are made more or less because of politics," he added. "There is always some sort of ring in control, just as there is in all things."

Others who spoke in favor of the bill were Edward Carr of Hopkinton, Miss Mary E. Corkery, assistant secretary of the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, Representative Roland Sawyer of Ware, Patrick M. Jennings of Boston C. L. U. and William J. Patrin.

Hill Fights Bill for Removal of Mayors

"In the long run Boston will do better if left to work out its own salvation in its own way," said Arthur D. Hill, corporation counsel for the city of Boston, today in opposing the bill of Representative Abbott B. Rice of Newton authorizing removal of Mayors by the Governor and Council for non-feasance, mis-feasance and nal-feasance in office. He appeared before the legislative committee on cities.

"We in Boston think we are as well able to take care of ourselves as the people of any other city in this State. I believe that this bill is aimed primarily at the city of Boston and I feel it would be exceedingly bad political judgment to enact this proposed law."

Move Opposed as Curb on Freedom of Speech

Many prominent lawyers, publicists and liberal thinkers appeared at the State House today before the legislative Committee on Judiciary in opposition to the petition of Merle D. Graves and Representative Eben S. Draper of Hopedale "to better define sedition and prescribe punishment therefor." They said it would interfere with free speech.

The petitioners admitted the bill was loosely drawn and that they were unable to support it in its present form, although believing in the principle of such legislation. The hearing was adjourned to give the proponents an opportunity to submit a substitute measure.

Among those who opposed the bill were former Attorney-General Herbert D. Parker, who thought it "sound in principal," but "too drastic and far-reaching in some of its phrases, and therefore might be oppressive"; Col. Alfred F. Foote, State Commissioner of Public Safety, who said he would submit amendments; Frederick T. Fuller, secretary of Harvard Liberal Club, who thought further legislation on sedition unnecessary; Nathan Haskell Dole and Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, who believed a "coach and four horses" could be driven through the bill.

Business Men Against Adding to Holidays

Claiming large sums of money were lost through suspension of business on holidays, several representatives of business houses appeared before the legislative Committee on Legal Affairs today in opposition to making additional holidays.

The committee considered petitions to make Lincoln's Birthday, Bunker Hill Day and Armistice Day legal holidays and to shift Thanksgiving Day to Armistice Day.

Woman Favors Bill on 4 Closed Banks

"Eighty per cent. of the people of Massachusetts are suspicious of the banks in this State," said Mrs. John Dixon today when she appeared before the Legislative Committee on Banks and Banking in advocacy of her bill that the State take over the assets of the Tremont, Hanover, Cosmopolitan and Prudential Trust Companies, which were closed by the Bank Commissioner, and reimburse depositors.

Grain for Starving Russians Loaded at Charlestown

Quinn Brothers, stevedores, today began loading 200,000 bushels of grain for starving Russia into the hold of the steamship Braddock at Hoosac Tunnel docks in Charlestown. As the grain has to be put in bags, big gangs of men will work night and day on the job.

The same stevedores were more than eight days loading the steamship Lloyd at the B. & A. terminals in East Boston recently, but with increased facilities they hope to load the Braddock in a week, although she will carry more than twice as much cargo.

The grain is run into the hold in bulk and bagged there, the men working rapidly in clouds of grain dust.

SUSPECT PLOT IN NORTHERN PACIFIC FIRE

Burning Not "Wholly Accidental," Say Survivors as Inquiry Is Started

Washington, Feb. 9.—An investigation of the origin and circumstances accompanying the fire which destroyed the former army transport Northern Pacific off the New Jersey coast was understood today to have been instituted by the government.

By Associated Press.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 9.—Survivors of the former transport Northern Pacific, which was burned at sea yesterday with a loss of four lives, are not convinced that the burning of the ship was wholly accidental.

Belief was expressed among the survivors that the fire was the result of some activity on board the vessel before she left her berth at Brooklyn.

An attorney for the Sun Shipbuilding Company was here today for the purpose of obtaining sworn statements from the crew. The men had been warned to say nothing.

Captain William Lusti, master of the Northern Pacific, declined to make a statement.

The steamship Transportation, which docked here, brought with it twenty-two survivors of the Northern Pacific, picked up from three lifeboats. Five other survivors, all of the ill-fated steamer's skeleton crew except the four men believed to have been lost, were taken onboard by the steamship Wylie, now at Old Point Comfort.

No one seemed to know how the fire started, but with the stern windward the fire spread quickly and all hands were forced to take to the boats quickly.

CROWD HANOVER FOR WINTER CARNIVAL

Dartmouth Men Speed Back on Specials for Sports; Torchlight Parade

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 8.—"Hanover—the rendezvous of pulchritude."

Thus remarked a bespeckled Dartmouth freshman early today as he beheld the vanguard of Winter Carnival guests trudging up the snowy roadway that leads from the railroad station, through the ancient covered bridge which spans the Connecticut, and thence into the picturesque streets of this New Hampshire college village.

Real old-fashioned Winters are the order here, with the ground many inches deep with snow; the thermometer dallying with the zero mark, and the neighboring fields and hills and ponds, and even the broad river, inviting one to come out and play.

It was inevitable that this invitation should lead to establishing a certain period given over solely to the enjoyment of Winter sports.

The Dartmouth Winter Carnival was the result; and so popular has it become with the students and their relatives and friends that special trains were required to transport to Hanover the throng which today is enjoying the opening events of the most elaborate program yet attempted by the Dartmouth Outing Club.

Rooming space is at a premium as the result of the unusually large number of guests. Many weeks ago all rooms in the Hanover Inn were spoken for, as were the rooms in the hotels of nearby towns.

The greater part of today was devoted to receiving visitors. The special train from New York arrived early this morning, and the Boston special shortly after noon.

The fete really gets under way this evening, starting with a torchlight procession to Faculty Pond, where there will be staged exhibitions of fancy skating, an interclass relay race and other ice events.

At the same time on the golf links nearby those who choose will engage in skiing and tobogganing, and the evening's outdoor festivities will be concluded with a songfest and fireworks.

JAP 'EXCURSION BRIDES' COMING TO AMERICA

California Editor Says Immigration Must Stop to Maintain Friendly Relations

By Associated Press.

Washington, Feb. 9.—If friendly relations with Japan are to be maintained, the United States Government "must effectually stop the continued admission of Japanese and the rapid increase of Japanese population," V. S. McClatchy, publisher of the Sacramento, Cal., Bee, declared today before the House Immigration Committee.

Urging Federal action along the lines approved by the California Legislature in its memorial to Congress last year, Mr. McClatchy said the gentlemen's agreement between this country and Japan should be cancelled as failing to carry out the purpose for which it was made, and this country should by treaty or legislation accomplish the intent of that agreement.

Mr. McClatchy said approximately 8,000 Japanese have been permitted to come into the United States under the agreements. While the immigration of Japanese "picture brides" has been stopped, "in deference to public protest," he said, there are now coming to this country "in still greater numbers" what he described as "excursion brides." These, he declared, are "urged to beget many children in order that the race may be permanently established on this continent."

Mr. McClatchy asserted the Japanese in this country were "maintaining here a government within a government, most dangerous to American institutions." The citizenship of those born here is being "utilized largely for purposes of Japan," he declared, adding that of the 90,000 claiming rights as American citizens by registration up to last year, only seventy-three had applied for expatriation from Japan.

McClatchy said there were nearly 20,000 Japanese minors born in Hawaii, now being educated in Japan, and between 10,000 and 15,000 who were born in California.

Goodman, who was confined to the hospital for several days, has been restored to light duty. A charge of drunkenness also was lodged against McDonald. He pleaded guilty and sentence was deferred pending the outcome of the other case.

COOK OBJECTED TO COMMENT ON HIS ART

Private Edward Croall, Company D, 12th Infantry, Fort Andrews, was tried today. He was charged with assault on Privates Horace Laberge and Joseph H. G. Aldsworth and Sergeant Martin Joyce. He is said to be such an artist in preparing the well-known dish he could mingle in the society of "Jiggs" and "Dinty" Moore.

HANOVER TRUST PROBE STARTS NEXT WEEK

Ponzi's Swindling Expected to Figure in Investigation by Grand Jury

The Suffolk Grand Jury will start an investigation of the tangled affairs of the closed Hanover Trust Company on Tuesday next.

Witnesses will be summoned the latter part of this week.

Evidence will be presented by Assistant Attorney-Generals Hurwitz and Goldberg, who directed the grand jury at the special sitting which recently resulted in an indictment against President Max Mitchell of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company, accusing him of misapplying more than $1,700,000 of the company's funds.

A large number of witnesses will be called in the inquiry into the Hanover Trust Company, the collapse of which followed closely the expose of Charles Ponzi's get-rich-quick swindle.

Ponzi was a heavy stockholder in the Hanover and had been a director, and on that account his affairs are expected to figure prominently in the evidence to be presented to the grand jury.

A report in the Hanover Trust inquiry is expected the latter part of next week.

The next bank to be investigated will be the Tremont Trust Company, and after that the Fidelity Trust Company will be investigated by the grand jurors.

War Bride to Make Concert Debut in Boston

A French war bride will make her debut in concert in Boston next Saturday at Jordan Hall when Yvonne Legrand appears in joint concert with Maria Mikova, Czech pianist.

Madame Legrand was a singer at the Paris Opera Comique when she met Captain J. J. Ryan of the American army. She had sung Michaela and Manon in that wonderful opera house and appeared in important roles in other French theatres. She abandoned her career to follow her American soldier husband to this country and for three years she has been in retirement as far as singing is concerned.

She decided to continue her singing a few months ago, and made her first appearances in Lynn in joint concert with Percy Grainger, the pianist, in one of the famous Lynn Star Course concerts. Since then she has been busy filling concert engagements about the country. Boston's first chance to hear her on Saturday.

10 BILLION IS ANNUAL COST OF DRUG EVIL

Dr. Ruth Reveals Great National Loss as Result of Illicit Narcotic Traffic

How the narcotic drug traffic costs the people of the United States over $10,000,000,000 a year is told in the following article prepared especially for the Boston American by Dr. Erwin C. Ruth, chief of the narcotic division of the Internal Revenue Department in Boston. Dr. Ruth has unrolled "dope" secrets all over this country and has examined many thousands of drug addicts. He tells how the illicit drug traffic takes its toll from the pocketbook of every person in the Union.

By DR. ERWIN C. RUTH.

Few persons in the United States seem to realize the seriousness of the narcotic drug evil. In recent years there has grown up a scourge that is gnawing at the vitals of civilization, undermining the happiness and welfare of our people.

The drug evil is a problem for the public and officials to solve. Of all that has been written and said about the problem, little attention has been told about its economic phases. In fact, legislative bodies have never considered the question very seriously.

The Federal government has a good law, but Congress does not see fit to provide sufficient money for its enforcement. The appropriation for the enforcement of the Federal drug laws is but $750,000, while some $9,000,000 is allowed for the enforcement of the national prohibition act.

Why does this state of affairs exist? First, because the public is not aroused to the danger of the drug menace. There are few societies or organizations formed for the purpose of enlightening the public on the drug evil. There are none in New England.

ADDICTS STEAL

Second, because the narcotic problem has always been presented to the public and to our legislators as a public health and moral situation.

Physicians and the ministers may talk and preach until eternity, but human nature will not be interested much until the evil is brought directly into a home, where it will be concealed owing to the shame created.

Then let the question be presented from an economic viewpoint. Does the American public realize that their tolerance of drug addiction costs them over $10,000,000,000 annually? Yet this is the case.

Conservative estimates place the number of drug addicts in this country at 2,000,000. Records indicate that one-half of all the drug addicts are not regularly employed in gainful occupations. They swell the ranks of unemployed. They live and use costly drugs, and they must get their money some place.

Drug addicts steal, destroy property and lives. Many police departments have kept records of such losses to the public. Extra hospital space, jails, officers, courts and enforcement bureaus must be maintained by the public to provide for the effects of the drug traffic.

EFFECT ON LIVING COSTS.

Manufacturers of narcotic drugs and hypodermic outfits are numerous and they are growing wealthy from the sale of their products. For this the public pays in the long run. The average daily cost of drugs to the addict is $5.50. The question arises where do the 2,000,000 drug users get $5.50 a day for drugs alone. Remember that in addition to this, each addict must eat, sleep and wear clothes. Where does the money come from for this?

An addict who steals to gain his funds receives but a small fraction of the original price of the article stolen. All stolen and destroyed property tends to elevate prices and insurance rates. This is but an indirect phase of the burden borne by the public as a result of the "dope" traffic.

PEDLARS ADULTERATE DOPE.

Most of the drugs sold illicitly in America are smuggled from foreign countries. The drugs cost around $50 a pound in Europe in the legitimate market, but by the time this pound is distributed to the addicts on the streets of this country in small packages of one to three grams, the proceeds total $3,600. These packages are called "decks" and sell around $1 apiece.

Much of the dope sold on the streets of Boston is adulterated by the "dope" pedlars. They mix it with salt, talcum powder, chalk, sugar of milk and other neutral drugs. Many addicts consume one pound of "dope" a year, but the average would run about a half pound.

It is not uncommon to find addicts driving street cars, automobiles and trucks and even fire engines. Often drug slaves hold positions where they are entrusted with public safety. Fatal accidents result.

Sick at sea?
In need of medical service?
You will get it by radio.

The United States Treasury Department, through its Bureau of Public Health Service, has made arrangements to radio free medical advice to ships at sea.

It will be couched in the terms of the laymen.

Orders, he said, have been issued to all medical officers in charge of United States Public Health Service stations that arrangements have been made with the Radio Corporation of America whereby they are to furnish advice requested through the corporation's coastal stations.

When a request for advice reached a coast station it will immediately be referred to th nearest designated government hospital and acted upon promptly.

A list of stations and hospitals covering the Atlantic and Pacific coasts is contained in the orders issued the medical officers.

Duplicate records will be kept of help requested and given.

Woman Is "Old" if Malden Officer Speaks to Her

Police Commissioner Frank D. Stevens has hit Malden "coppers" right in their diplomacy.

They're gasping for a way out. The commissioner issued an order directing policemen not to talk with young women.

There's the rub. The "Commish" said "young women."

Listen to Patrolman Charley Costello:

"How you going to get around it?" said Charley. "If a woman speaks to you and you answer her, you brand her as being old. And when you do that, son, you might just as well pray for wings. There ain't nothing hits 'em harder than age. Man, I know!

"I don't think the 'Commish' suspects us old-timers of being chicken chasers. He's just aiming at the new coppers. What are we going to do about it?"

JOBLESS WAVE HITS ACTORS IN NEW YORK

Half of the 15,000 Legitimate Stage Folk in U. S. Said to Be Unemployed

New York, Feb. 9 (By the Associated Press).—There are today more unemployed actors and other stage people walking along Broadway and a hundred main streets looking for jobs than ever before. Everybody in Times square who knows anything about the theatre from the cut-rate ticket hawker to the producer of a dozen hits, is complaining.

The tailors, landladies and boarding house owners seem to feel the hard times as acutely as the actors. They have sought a great many judgments these last few weeks against stage folk who overlooked the rather prosaic duty of paying their bills.

In larger cities of the country where the lights flicker ony a little less brightly than in Broadway, conditions are just as bad, according to the heads of producing concerns and organizations of actors.

Several well-known actors estimated today that half of the 15,000 actors in the United States, exclusive of vaudeville performers, were out of work. The Actors' Equity Association said the number was not that large, but was 20 per cent. worse than usual.

137-YEAR-OLD INDIAN LAID TO REST

"Oldest Man in America" Is Honored by Suspension of Town's Business

By the Associated Press.

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 9.—The body of Ga-be-nah-gown-wonce, America's oldest Indian and probably the oldest man in America, was buried here today with simple services according to the white man's creed and with none of the rites of his tribe. He was in his 138th year at the time of his death Tuesday from pneumonia.

During the funeral ceremony business was at a standstill, all stores, schools and factories closing for the occasion.

Indians from all parts of the northwest thronged the town to pay their respects to the Chippewa chieftain, who had attained almost twice the allotted span of human life.

The body was enclosed in a rough wooden box, according to his expressed wish and the chief mourner was Tom Smith, an adopted son.

Throughout his life John Smith, as he was also known, had been a leader among his people and during recent years he had been a national character. One of the great acts of service to his tribe was the part he took in the formulating of the original treaty between the Chippewas and white men in 1345.

A Saving of $50

How the Opportunity Arose

ALL VOCALIONS were formerly made in America, but the phenomenal demand for the Vocalion has made it cheaper, on account of freight and import duties, to manufacture also in foreign countries.

It is a group of the Vocalions which were in process of manufacture at the time this change of policy went into effect which we are now offering.

These instruments are identical with the regular American models, except for slight differences in size and case design. In Workmanship, Mechanism and Tone they are in all respects up to the highest standards of phonograph manufacture.

IMPORTANT—Our allotment by the Aeolian Co. of this special model is limited. CALL EARLY.

The Wonderful Graduola

This instrument is equipped with the exclusive device—the GRADUOLA. No Vocalion so equipped has been offered at so low a price before. The GRADUOLA makes the phonograph complete—makes it an instrument for you to PLAY as well as hear. You shade the melody to suit your mood of the moment.

With Records and Albums

During this sale we will deliver this instrument with $10 worth of records of your own selection and two record albums. Price complete, $98. Weekly terms same as quoted above.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Bert Lytell Is Newest Star to Go In for Fewer and Better Pictures

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

BERT LYTELL is the newest of the stars to go in for fewer and better pictures.

"I want," he said, "to make two, or three, or, at the outside, four productions a year. I want them to be 'big' pictures in every sense of the word. They must be founded on strong, well-rounded stories to begin with, something like 'The Right of Way' that I did for Metro some time ago. They are not to be regular program pictures, but a full evening's entertainment. That's what I want to do! I don't know how soon these dreams will come true."

Mr. Lytell is making a personal tour of the United States under the Metro banner during the next six weeks that the screen has shut down its producing plant. Since they are releasing schedules for shrewd of their both Bert and Viola Dana have been getting in touch with their audiences.

BERT LYTELL

This week Mr. Lytell is appearing at the Bowdoin Square Theatre.

MARKET OVERSTOCKED.

"There are so many producing concerns now," he went on, "that the market is overstocked with pictures. There are quantities of good films tied up in the studio because there is no way of getting them signed up by exhibitors. This is nothing, of course, against the pictures in question, but it means that the theatre owners and exhibitors have had to take certain pictures with certain others. They may often want but one of the pair and would fill out their bill with still another production, but they must take both or do without either.

"If more players made fewer and better pictures there would be a greater advance in the art of the industry. As far as the smaller houses are concerned, there always are and always will be companies that make smaller films."

Mr. Lytell spoke on the Taylor mystery.

"Of course, everyone who is connection with the industry must take an interest in it," he said, "because it involves all of us somewhat. It's unfortunate that such things should happen, because it puts us under the stigma.

REFLECTS ON ALL.

"The motion picture industry needs many hundreds of persons to carry it on. Of the players only a small percentage are of them from the stage. The rest are from all parts of the country, and from all walks of life. Right in Hollywood is a cross-section of the human race. When a certain portion of them break the law, it reflects on the entire colony.

"As regards this particular case, it's hard to make any definite statement, because of the vagueness of the affair. It seems impossible that Mary Miles Minter or Mabel Normand could be mixed up in it, because they are among the nicest girls in Hollywood.

"Something will have to be done, naturally, about stopping all such happenings as the 'dope parties' and wild affairs that are coming to light. Those who belong to the crowds that do such things must be weeded out. The motion picture industry is in such shape now, or will be very soon, that only the highest in every branch of the work can be kept.

YET TO HEAR WHISPER

"As a matter of fact, and this is the truth, I have yet to hear even a whisper of 'dope' parties. There have been one or two under suspicion, I've understood, but outside of that I've never run against it.

"There are many very cultured people out there, and they are made to suffer for the wrongs of others who have neither brains nor the inclination to develop them. Clara Kimball Young, for instance, has a wonderful home, and she entertains well known writers, players, artists, scientists. The real players, and by that I mean those who are successful in giving the public something tangible, are far too busy and interested in their work to bother with 'wildness.' They are the ones who can carry on the motion pictures as they should be carried on. The rest must go."

Harding Has Wireless Telephone in White House Study

Washington, Feb. 9.—President Harding is having a wireless telephone installed in his study in the White House, it was learned here. BRAINTREE BOY TRIES SUICIDE AT ARREST

15-Year-Old Prisoner Held for 2 Postoffice Robberies in Cohoes, N. Y.

Cohoes, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Carl Goodnow, fifteen years old, of No. 71 Hall road, street, Braintree, wanted by the police for two postoffice robberies, was arrested here after he had attempted suicide by leaping from a bridge into the Hudson River.

Before the lad climbed to the bridge rail, he threw a traveling bag and in any loose papers into the river. The police have been unable to recover them.

Goodnow, well groomed, was up on the railing when a passerby saw him, rushed to his aid and prevented his leap to the swirling waters of the Hudson, twenty-five feet or more below. A Cohoes policeman arrested the boy.

Goodnow, according to the police, confessed to robbing the postoffice at Killory and also a postoffice near his home in Braintree. He was recently paroled from the House of Correction.

The boy told the police a weird story of having walked from Boston to Albany. He was held on charge of attempted suicide and fugitive from justice.

U. S. GRAND JURY PROBES IRISH GUN SEIZURE

Three witnesses examined were Colonel Marcellus H. Thompson, of New York, son-in-law of Ambassador Harvey and vice-president of the Auto Ordnance Company, from which the guns were purchased; Captain Geoffrey Bartlett, manager of the Cosmopolitan Shipping Company, and Roy C. McHenry.

Worcester, Feb. 9.—Frank Campanello of No. 20 Shamrock street, who mysteriously disappeared January 16 leaving his wife and seven small children has returned home but refuses to discuss his case with the police. BACK BAY CARETAKER HELD AS RUM SELLER

Joseph Barry, thirty-six years old, of No. 246 Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay, was arrested by officers of the Back Bay Station charged with selling a quart of whisky to a police officer. The police also seized, they claim, several empty bottles and jars and three and one-half quarts of liquor. Barry is a caretaker in the Commonwealth avenue house which is used as a storeroom by M. Kabachnick, Boylston street antique dealer.

KILLED HUSBAND BECAUSE HE BOOTLEGGED

BOYS WILL BE BOYS! Those youngsters don't want to be outdone by their sons in the annual Winter carnival at Winnipeg, Canada, so here we catch them ready to wrestle the snow a bit. Nearly the whole town takes part in these gala snow fetes.

MAYOR ADOLPH UHLER of Tiffin, Ohio, has established three bread stores in his city in a fight against bread profiteers. He sells the product at 6 cents a loaf. The others ask 8 cents. (I.)

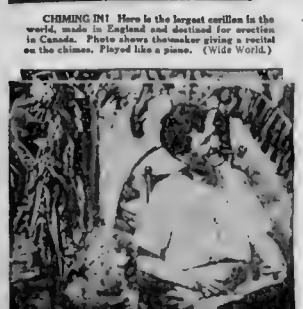
WANT TO KNOW HOW these little chocolate covered ice cream bricks are made? The hard ice cream is cut into bricks and dipped into chocolate of 85 degrees. Operator works fast and moves brick into refrigerator the moment after it is dipped. (Underwood.)

MRS. JULIA JOHNSTONE, now on trial in Los Angeles as the slayer of her husband, admits she shot him because he persisted in bootlegging. She feared for the effect it would have on her daughter. (International.)

FRANK A. PERRET, of the Carnegie Institute, who predicts that the next big volcanic eruption, likely to come any day, will be in the Lipan Island, near Stromboli. (Keystone.)

SPRING BLOWS IN! The advance fashion, exclusive to the newspaper, shows a stroller [illegible] which is parted in the middle to show a crown of straw. (Underwood.)

A SWEATER! Mrs. Jack McCarthy of Boston is wearing one of the favorite garbs of Palm Beach—Indian sweater with white sport skirt and hat to match. (International.)



CHIMING IN! Here is the largest carillon in the world, made in England and destined for erection in Canada. Photo shows thewmaker giving a recital on the chimes. Played like a piano. (Wide World.)

LET'S GO FOR A SPIN, OLD TOP! That's probably what Mrs. Jack McCartney Farr of New York City murmured when she asked hubby to take her for a dash through the palm-shaded lanes at Palm Beach. (Underwood.)

OH, SPLASH! The athletic courses prescribed by the Chicago public schools is one of the reasons that the city is developing some of the best swimmers in the country. Two of these high school girls are champions in their own right. (International.)

ALL UP IN THE AIR! These enormous lumber piles have a spectacular appearance that attracts tourists at Puget Sound. The mill owners have solved a problem which has effected a great saving in space. The stacks vary in height from 60 to 75 feet and are built with the aid of the mechanical stacker shown in the photo. The towering lumber piles rest upon sills 20 feet below the surface of the roadway on which the stacker rests, thus about 35 feet can be stacked without mechanical aid.

A NUTTY BUSINESS! E. A. Cathcart is the original coconaut sculptor, and each year finds him plying his art at Miami. He estimates he has carved 35,000 nuts (referring to the South Sea fruit). Here he is at work in his "studio." (International.)

NEPTUNE'S CUTIE! Alice Man, 13, who swam across the Panama Canal at Culebra Cut with her hands and feet manacled, is now hailed as the most physically perfect girl of her age. (International.)

ANOTHER SIDE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN! Not many admirers of the immortal Lincoln know him as an inventor. This device above is a model of pontoon he invented for bearing vessels over shoals, for which a patent was granted on May 22, 1849. Lincoln, at the time, lived in Springfield, Ill. For some reason the invention was never found to be practical. (P. & A.)

THE JUDGE SAID: "You are charged with speeding." Said the defendant: "Funny thing about me, Judge, everything I do I do fast." Saith the Judge in his inimitable way: "Well, let's see how fast you can do 60 days in our rock pile 'making little ones out of big ones.'" Los Angeles' famous rock pile for auto speeders, established at the suggestion of Police Judge Chambers, is doing a thriving business. These chaps are serving from 10 to 180 days on the "pile" at the Lincoln Heights Police Station. Note the sarcastic signs. (Underwood.)

JOIN THE "GO-GETTERS" AND SHARE IN $5,000

Before the $5,000 Membership Competition is three days old the Test Editor is asked:

"How many are taking part in it?"

"What will be the high score?"

Any reply to the second question would be nothing more than guesswork. It is safer to venture an answer to the first.

Probably two hundred of those who took part in the $5,000 Book Test—and these alone are eligible to this Membership Competition—have seriously entered the race for the $5,000 which is about to be divided among those who send in the largest numbers of New Competitors for the Famous Titles Test.

SOME JUICY PLUMS

In other words, the Test Editor feels almost certain that the following juicy plums are almost gulp begging:

It remains as true today as yesterday that this money—and particularly the worth-while awards—will be divided among a small number of "Go-Getters."

WHO WANTS EASY CASH?

The question to be decided by everyone who took part in the Book Test is "Am I an 'I-Wisher,' or a 'Go-Getter'?"

If, probably it does not have to be decided! If you ARE a "Go-Getter," you KNOW it!

But all, folks, who IS going to have Whooney?

Well, there are ninety-nine reasons why! taking an active part in the competition. Everyone knows them. Com of them may be set down here: Some haven't got a chance!"

"Oh, this space is too small!"

"Some one in Boston will get all." (Or, in Boston, "That'll go th some one up in Maine!") to'l never was any good at that ed of thing."

k "Oh, so you've got to go around d get new members; I knew there was some catch to it."

th'I started out and a couple of my friends gave me the laugh."

m'Everybody I know takes the Boston American, anyhow."

But if this was next Fall I'd hop to it, but right now——"

While the "Go-Getter" takes the other attitude:

o'Oh I—I want some of this money and

I—I'm going to get it!

INVITED TO PARTICIPATE.

Only a word or two more about the Membership Competition, and the Main Bout will be put on.

Only those who took part in the Book Test can take part in the Membership Competition.

This does not mean that your success in the Book Test depends upon what you do in the Membership Competition. It is not, as one woman appears to have concluded, "something added onto the Book Test." If you do not want to take part in the Membership Competition, you do not have to. You are "invited," not required or pressured. Step up and take $1,000, $750, $500, $400 or one of the other awards, if you want it. Take it or leave it. NOBODY will get it. The money MUST BE WON, when the Top Score is 100 or only 16.

Plenty room! Enrollment Blanks here for those who want them. All you've got to do is to ask. No reason why your friends may not help you out.

And now we come to the Book Test.

NO. 31 IS "SAMSON."

They say over at Test Headquarters that some day next week they hope to be able to give an occasional item about some specimen Good Scores. At this writing, they do not know of a single one of even FIVE individual. And they blame the Test Editor (as is the custom in these parts), pointing out that his policy of inclusive of mailing everybody an acknowledgement has delayed Test Head quarters exactly one week.

The Correct Title of Book Test Drawing No. 31 is "Samson," of course. And No. 32 was one everyone must have solved, namely: "Rest and Unrest." The gentleman is not only sleeping but snoring, while the wave-crest this be denied!—are plainly in a ferment.

Is anybody going to say about "Samson" that in order to get this title it was necessary to have read a book called "Samson"? That was the case with reference to "Robinson Crusoe" and "Rip Van Winkle," but if you did not know immediately that the figure drawn by Mr. Artist was meant to suggest the Israelite distinguished for his great strength (see Judges XIII.) you could have found at least a hint in Webster's New International.

What was it the Test Editor said so many times while the Book Test was on? Remember that the List of Titles is at least as much a part of the Test as the Drawings. And, again, "it is possible to find the Correct Title even if you know nothing about THE BOOK INDICATED IN THIS LIST OF TITLES."

NAMES 16 TITLES.

Dear Test Editor—Will you kindly answer my question in my column? It is about No. 20. I am not sure whether I wrote "The Tempest" or merely "Tempest." In either case will I be credited with a Correct Title? I have entered the letters from contestants almost as much as the Test itself. If it is not asking too much I should like to know what you will do with my solution. Yours truly,

A. B. Lawrence.

"A. B." has named sixteen Correct Titles. The question is, has he placed them properly? That we shall all know, later. He appears to have had the correct title of "The Tempest," but undoubtedly will be given an "error" for omitting the article.

Dear Test Editor—I hope another letter from me will be allowed. I have read the letter sent in by W. O. of Westerly and let me console him, for I have lost so many Title I have lost the exact figures I leaned on how badly I stuck before a dictionary and the rest could do the wonder. I part of it is if I had it to do over again I would use the same figures I would not be a sensible error in a big competition. But I would have missed it for anything and hope to redeem myself now in this error but I have gone in and No. 26 referred in. I wonder if any one else decided in favor of Book Head and No. 31 the "Letter"?

Plenty room! Title is used in regard to money and not in point of view.

I took Jeanne Kase to the opera a night before. The first was excellent. The letters "e" and "g." The last word the letter "e" of the musical score. Cheap stuff.) No wonder I have lost so much!

Thank you, Margie; and has anybody else any testimony to offer?

FELL DOWN AT NO. 25.

Dear Test Editor—Like many others, I fell down at No. 25. I found the Correct Title a Book before I went over the list, but like many others dropped the figures I did not think the Correct Title could such a thing and call it Adam. Now I see my error. The Correct Title was not an Honeymoon at Niagara. Now we know all the ladies are beautiful but how could a man's head be drawn from that poor thing? To me it was very, very funny. Yours truly,

E. F. Whitten. I observed thinks the oldboy was rash. There will be quite a few. I do not think it must kill me to find out I am one of the many. I will do better on the next one. I will be glad for him to wait.

Will those who are seriously taking part in the $5,000 Membership Competition please remember this: Enrollment Blanks are NOT to be sent in piecemeal. Hold them. Send them in at one time. On or before Wednesday, March 1.

SPECIAL TAXES FOR BONUS DECIDED ON

Levy Limited to One Year, Then War Debt Interest Will Be Used

Washington, Feb. 9.—Special taxes will be levied for one year to provide funds with which to start bonus payments to former service men. Thereafter interest from the foreign loans will be used, the House Ways and Means Committee decided.

Two sub-committees were appointed to complete the work of drafting the bonus measure. One with Chairman Fordney at its head will draw up the financing provision upon which President Harding has insisted. The second, with Representative Green of Iowa as chairman, will perfect the five-option bonus plan that was laid before the Senate last Summer.

No agreement has been reached as yet as to what new taxes will be adopted. Chairman Fordney said he personally favors placing a tax on the sale of stocks and bonds and on transfers of property. Other proposals that have been submitted will be given thorough consideration now however, before any final action is taken by the committee.

Advocates of the sales tax have asked for a hearing before the sub-committee. They will urge adoption of the Canadian law, modified somewhat, as the most equitable means of raising new revenue.

PROBE REFUSED BY HAVERHILL SCHOOL BOARD

Haverhill, Feb. 9.—By a unanimous vote the School Board turned down the request of the City Council for an investigation of school department affairs by a committee of three representing the council, the School Board and the teachers. Many of the complaints were directed at the policies of the superintendent of schools, Albert L. Barbour.

Salem Girls Accosted by Six-Foot Veiled Masquerader

Salem, Feb. 9.—Several Salem grade women residing in the vicinity of Grove, Fremont, School, Japonica and Dunlap streets have asked for police protection against a six-foot veiled apparition which they believe is a man masquerading in a woman's clothes.

In several cases the young women have been badly frightened by being accosted by the unknown individual who has a habit of stepping out of the shadows directly in their path.

HELICOPTER IN SUCCESSFUL FLIGHT

Rises Vertically From Ground and Remains in Air Several Minutes

By Universal Service.

London, Feb. 9.—Louis Brennan's experimental Helicopter completed its first actual successful test at the Bamborough Aerodrome Rising vertically from the ground and hovering in midair for some minutes, the Helicopter landed light as a feather at most on the identical spot from which it rose.

The machine, weighing more than a ton, carrying a pilot and 250 pounds of excess weight, and with a heavy supply of gasoline, was sent up secretly in a gyroscopic test.

The experiment showed according to Brennan, the possibilities of a greater upward lift.

Radio Outfit Given School

Leominster, Feb. 8.—The class of 1920 of the local high school donated a complete radio outfit to the school, which was tried for the first time at a meeting of the Teachers' Association held at the high school building. One hundred teachers were present.

DANGER OF JUST LETTING A COLD RUN ITS COURSE

Public Warned to Beware of a Three Days' Cough and Break It Up Before It's Too Late, by Taking Kurokol, the New Scientific Discovery.

Money Refunded If Kurokol Fails to Bring Relief.

Leading authorities are using every effort to arouse the public to the danger of letting common colds run their course, for it is definitely known that many serious lung complications such as pneumonia, grippe, etc., develop from colds that hang on persistently.

Colds are curable and preventable, and Kurokol provides the safest, surest and quickest, as well as the most practical treatment for colds yet discovered.

Kurokol is almost magical in its effect. The first dose usually stops the tendency to sneezing and coughing, and relieves the feeling of discomfort, and the second and third doses usually suffice to stop the progress of a cold altogether.

The wonderful efficiency of Kurokol is best shown by the fact that all druggists are instructed to refund money where it fails to give satisfactory results. Advertisement.

Value and Price

THE impression often prevails that because an article possesses greater quality, it must necessarily be higher in price. However true this may be in other lines, it doesn't apply to SONORA.

Many times it has been stated by prospective purchasers of phonographs that "I would purchase a Sonora, but for its high price." That impression exists because Sonora is recognized as The Highest Class Talking Machine in the World; but the fact is that there is a Sonora to meet every price requirement. And every Sonora, no matter at what price, represents the very best value that money can buy, possessing all the quality that has made this name famous the world over.

"WAITERS" WIN IN OVERTIME ICE GAME

Westminster Team Now Leads League by Virtue of Victory Over Marquettes

Westminster leads the eastern section of the United States Hockey League, and unless the stout hearted athletes fall into an entirely unnatural and unexpected slump, the team will eventually battle the champions of the West for national supremacy. And the Westies will go into the fray backed by the confidence of Boston's great army of hockey fans.

The Waiters proved they had the courage and the skill that champions need when they took the pinnacle by defeating Pere Marquette in as sturdy and thrilling an ice conflict as ever was played. Through three sparkling periods the players struggled, never for an instant easing up the terrific pace that was established with the opening whistle.

Forty five minutes of heart failure found the score tied at one nil. So an extra session was staged. Pere Marquette, a bit careless perhaps, left a couple of openings, and in a twinkling of an eyelash, went down to defeat.

Irving Small and Norman Shay hooked the fleeting puck into the draperies before that additional stanza was five minutes old and that was all there was to the game. The Knights surged desperately until the final bell, but never could break through the stubborn defence of the blue and gold outfit.

It was Boston's biggest hockey occasion. A record crowd packed every corner of the Arena. Cheering started when the teams glided onto the ice for preliminary practice and never let up till the weary performers had departed when everything was settled.

Sentiment inclined toward the Knights, perhaps, but there was no lack of generosity in the wild yell that greeted the victorious assault of the Westies in that ultimate chapter. The Knights made the conflict even, right down to the close, but the enemy had just a little too much class and eventually it told.

It wasn't a gentle contest, not at all. The players after fifty five minutes of intense exercise looked and felt like Jess Willard did that day out in Toledo when Jack Dempsey cut loose.

Continually the flying puck carrier crashed into the defensive outposts or the sideboards; spills were matters of every minute; sticks flew wildly and at times regular football scrimmages followed wild rushes toward the nets, but playing was clean, though hard, and quite a few of the frequent penalties were unrailed for.

Holsey Baker has shown Boston some wonderful skating; some of the Canadian experts who toured in were real flyers but we doubt if any other combat played here ever packed such a combination of speed and nifty puck handling by both outfits. Picking out individuals were fruitless, for every player won deserved meed of the continuous plaudits.

Even the goal tenders were unanimously saluted, as they studied toward the cause for the last period. Mowers Romine and Donahue weren't exceptionally busy during the evening, owing to the great defense out in front, but when the occasions arrived, they were very much present.

The Knight guardian had the toughest time of it, and but for several splendid flying tackles of his, his gang never would have carried the affair into extra innings.

I. Danis won the one-mile speed race. T. A. Corcoran was second and C. F. Atkins third.

BABY MILK FUND GETS GIBBONS AND GREB

Boxers Will Battle for Greatest Charity in New York on March 13

New York, Feb. 9.—Tom Gibbons of St. Paul will meet Harry Greb of Pittsburgh in Madison Square Garden on March 13, fifteen rounds to a decision.

The profits of the bout will go to the milk fund of the Mayor's committee of women, of which Mrs. William Randolph Hearst is chairman. It is believed that Gibbons and Greb will draw one of the biggest gates in the history of boxing in New York.

The milk fund, greatest of New York charities, supplies milk to the children of the poor.

Both agreed to accept a flat price. They are getting a big purse, but both shaded their original figures slightly in view of the cause and for the reason that each realizes a victory is almost sure to produce a match for the championship.

Greb crawled through the ropes sixteen times last year and did not lose a decision. He is twenty-five years old and has been fighting for eight years. Gibbons is twenty-nine years old.

Gibbons will outweight Greb by 175 pounds to about 164, but Greb is used to giving away poundage because of being unable to find any opponents of his own heft.

Says a Man Owes His Life to His Country, but Some Dame Comes Along and Collects It

A prominent professor says that men and women who stay single are a menace to society, and maybe he's right, but a lot of them who get married are a menace to each other.

He says that every woman should get married before she dies. He's correct, because they'd have a hard job getting a license afterward.

College claim that you owe society a marriage, but the trouble is some guys are paying their debt three or four times.

If a woman stays single she cheats society. If she gets married, she cheats herself.

The average woman knows she owes it to society to get married, but she spends her whole life trying to find out what society she owes it to.

This professor says it's a crime for a woman to reach eighty and be single. He's wrong, a married woman would have a hard job living that long.

The average married woman doesn't live to be eighty, it only seems like it.

If people pay their debt to society by getting married, then the couples who sue for divorce must be trying to get their money back.

A man who stays single isn't trying to cheat the country, he believes in deferred payments.

The trouble is, some men don't get married at all, others get married now and then, and the rest of them get married all the time.

They're paying their bill, but they're doing it on the installment plan.

Of course some guys get married, and then their wives get through with them, they haven't anything left to pay society.

They owe their life to their country, but some dame comes along and collects it.

According to professors, a woman should not reach sixty, single. If she gets that far single then she should worry.

Stay single and you owe society. Get married and you owe everybody else.

GRIFFITHS SAYS DEMPSEY COULD HAVE BEATEN JOHN L. SULLIVAN

By JACK CONWAY

"The boxers of today are better than those of ten years ago!"

Johnny Griffiths, Akron, Ohio welterweight, who opposes Mickey Walker of Newark in a ten-round bout at the Commercial A. C.'s show at Mechanics Building tomorrow night, brought he right fist forcefully down on top of this writer's desk in the sporting department.

"It gives me considerable amusement to hear some of the old-time fight fans relate how our boxers are losing class," continued Griffiths. "It is twelve years since I started boxing. Therefore, I believe I am in a position to judge the merits of the ring men of a decade ago compared with our warriors of today.

"Experience is the great teacher As other lines of sport have improved, so has the boxing game. The young stars of today have mastered all the tricks and feats of the oldtimers, while they are also blessed with their own natural skilfulness.

"Watch this kid, Mickey Walker, when I battle Friday night. He is naturally tricky and classy. He will hook with his left or smash his right to the head or body and then fall into a clinch. Just when you are beginning to think he will remain out of action until ordered to break by the referee he falls out of the clinch and starts banging away with both hands for the body as if the future prosperity of the world depended upon his efforts.

"There are a number of other sterling young welterweights like Walker. They already know more about the fine points of the ring game than some of the old-timers did when they were at the height of their glory.

"How often have you heard some of the men who followed the boxing game years ago telling the younger generation of fans about the ability of John L. Sullivan. They will contend that the great John L. could beat Dempsey or any of our present-day heavyweights.

"I'll admit Sullivan was a great fighter, but he did not know one-third as much about the fine points of the game as Dempsey. The latter, I am firmly convinced, could have beaten Sullivan the best day the latter had.

"When I hear people talking about the superiority of the old-timers it reminds me of a farmer I once knew down in Texas. He was a rough sort of fellow who lived and grew healthy on very rough food. His favorite dish was a boiled pig's head. Oil was later discovered on the farmer's land. He sold his holdings to one of the big companies and had built for himself a palatial home in Dallas

"He then started a new way of living. A Chinese cook served only the choicest of dishes. After several years of this sort of life the former farmer had a banquet which was attended by friends from all parts of Texas. A bountiful meal was served. After everybody had eaten to their heart's content, the farmer made a speech in which he said that even with all his money he missed the old food which tasted as well as that he used to have before he gained his wealth.

"He announced he would soon have another dinner at which he would have boiled pig's head and all of the dishes which he formerly liked so well. The dinner was staged, but after two courses had been served the former farmer said he could not get enjoyment out of the old dishes any more. He stated that his tastes had changed and that while pig's head was very good when he did not know a great deal about better food, he would have to confess that his form of diet had improved.

"So it is with the old-time fight fans. If they were to see three bouts of other years perform against the stars of today they would realize that boiled pig's head, as it were, does not compare with choice tenderloin cuts."

Mickey Travers, Vic Richardson's sturdy puncher, will get his action again Friday night when he battles Billy Murphy of New York in a ten-round bout at the Crescent A. C. of Lowell. This looms forth as a regular quarrel. Travers recently defeated Bobby Josephs and K. O. Charley Elkins and does not know of any reason why he should not add Murphy to his list of victims. As for Murphy, he has been tripping along the pugilistic highways at a rapid clip and even he will surge to victory this p. m.

A rather remarkable athlete is Griffiths. He has fought Britton three times, while he has battled Ted (Kid) Lewis on eight occasions. One of Griffiths' bouts with Britton was held in Boston and ended in a draw. The Akron boxer appeared here on another occasion against Willie Beecher. He handed this warrior a sound thumping.

Griffiths has battled in Australia and all over Europe. His wonderful skill as a boxer has enabled him to beat back most opposition without trouble. A month ago at Jersey City the Akron man went twelve rounds to a draw with Mickey Walker. This was a rather remarkable feat when it is considered that Griffiths made a trip from Portland, Ore., to Jersey City and did not have time to even rest up for the bauts. He was also bothered by an injured nose, which bled all through the match.

Griffiths says he is now in perfect condition and that he will set the pace from the time the bell sounds at the opening of the first round in the hope of being well out in front when the contest ends.

Billy Woods and Mickey Perkins have been signed to mingle in a ten-round bout at the Medford A. C. on next Monday night.

Mickey Travers has been matched to meet Joe Currie at New Haven on February 15, and Young Kaplan in the same city on March 8.

Jack Delaney, one of our new ring stars, will meet Louis Hogash at Bridgeport on February 13. Delaney has scored wins over Soldier Frank, Battling Stivers, Ted Marcell, Jack Savage, Young Jack Johnson, Jack Mason, Bert Colma, and Frankie Fleming. David H. Cohan, a Boston wool merchant who has seen Delaney in action, believes that Jack is destined to become a champion.

CALZA WILL WRESTLE GUS KAVAROS TONIGHT

George Calza, who disputes Renato Gardini's claim for the Italian wrestling championship, will show Boston fans his mat tricks tonight at the Grand Opera House, when he takes on Gus Kavaros, the Greek heavyweight.

Calza has never been defeated, but he has no soft job this p. m., for Kavaros outweighs him by about 15 pounds and is a very sturdy performer. Both men have splendid war records, and for that reason the match is popular with the vets in these parts.

TUFTS AGAINST BATES FIVE TONIGHT

Basketball Game With Maine Team at Goddard Gym Brought Forward

The Bates-Tufts basketball game which was scheduled to be played on Friday night, has been put forward. It will be played tonight, so as not to conflict with the annual Tufts Musical Club Concert at Jordan Hall. The program tonight is a double-header, the Tufts second team will play the Boston "Y" 1920 team prior to the varsity Bates game. The first game will start at 7:15 o'clock.

While Rounds watches the roving Bates centre, Captain Hopkins and Daly are slated to look after the defence. Captain Hopkins is improving with every game, and a fine exhibition of defence play is expected. Karl Upton's knee has rounded into shape, and so the forward position will be materially strengthened

The varsity has six more games, including those with Harvard, Wesleyan, Brown, Coach Ferguson is planning to make all as exciting as possible.

The Tufts second game with the Boston "Y" 1920 team should be interesting, as Coach Leclair's team has been coming along in fine style and should make the "Y" team run for honors.

At present Captain Pickett and Marvin are playing the forward position, Gallivan, center; Gilfillan, Dyer and Maddison, backs; with Colucci, Henderson and Green as reliable subs. The second's last victory was the Cambridge "Y," and the Jumbos are out to repeat with the Boston team.

REDUCED EXPENSES WILL BOOM GOLF GAME

By JOCK HUTCHISON

Golfers are finding consolation in the fact that golf balls are cheaper and that most all of the new clubs being formed have decided to tax the members less than they had been accustomed to paying at other clubs.

The government, by taking the tax off of sporting goods, has helped a lot toward cheaper golf. Labor being more reasonable has enabled golf clubs to operate more cheaply than at any time since the war.

The high cost of golfing has not discouraged the beginner, nor has it in the least interfered with the golf played by the regulars. This probably is the reason that the expenses of playing the game have remained high while the cost of other things has been tumbling.

The peak of expensive golf has been reached and passed, and this is something to cheer over. Prices had become ridiculously high, and it seemed as if everyone had taken a particular delight in rubbing it in on the poor golf players.

One must have been in pretty fair circumstances to begin playing golf a few years ago. To get measured for a set of clubs, a golf suit, a pair of good shoes and a dozen of the best balls, to say nothing of taking out a membership in a high class golf club, cost a small fortune, Just how so many managed to do it has been a puzzler. I know a lot of men who figured it a good investment on health.

I am going to enumerate a few items, the cost of which a year ago were about a fourth or a third higher than today.

If one then were to drop into a golf shop and ask for an outfit and inquire on the best of everything, the outlay in good American dollars would be considerable. A first class driver would cost something like $18,000 and a brassie the same. The irons would average $6 each. Ten clubs would total $75 and a bag to put them in would run as high as $40. A golf suit could be had for $140, a sweater for $35, a pair of good golf shoes $40, golf stockings—one would want at least three pairs—at $12 per pair would run up to $46.

If one undertook to get a membership in a high class club it would run up into thousands, as high as $2,000 has been the price asked by clubs near New York and Chicago. Of course, this is not all a direct loss, as the membership represents so much stock, but dues on the side pay for all the golf played.

Taxi drivers charged as high as $1 to take one from the train to the club and fares were more or less at an item if one played often. Then there was the luncheon at the club, the caddy hire, etc., which helped to swell the expenses.

Twenty-five years ago in Scotland golf was ridiculously cheap in comparison to golf in America today. The price was so insignificant that it amounted to scarcely nothing. Caddy hire cost nothing and golf balls were only a shilling or two and caddy hire even less. A golf suit cost as little as three or four pounds and clubs —the very best to be had—were obtainable for three or five shillings. Golf shoes were not expensive and hose cost three or four shillings.

It is little wonder that golf flourished in Scotland and England. The royal and ancient pastime began to get a hold in America about that time. Dues in the clubs were inexpensive then and not an item to be considered twice. The old gutta percha ball we obtainable for 50 cents at the most and as low as twenty-five.

Some things that we used for golfing purposes will remain high. There is a great scarcity of good hickory from which we make our shafts. A few years ago high-grade shafts were easy to buy on the market for 15 and 20 cents each. Now we took a jump to 40 cents and we pros though this was an outrageous price, but the shafts kept on going up until it cost a dollar bill to get one, and it was not always a good one.

Substitutes for hickory are in the market, but nothing has yet been devised to take their places. There is the bamboo shaft that looks promising, but it is just now very costly. The steel shaft is being experimented with and may solve the problem. It is said to be unbreakable, and, if this is true, no matter how much it would cost, it would be economical in the end. It should live much longer than a hickory product

Americans, should they care to, can now boast of the greatest golf courses in the world. Money has not been spared to make them the best and the advantage America has had in being able to copy the finest holes abroad has helped to give us as compromises between the old and the new

For the well-to-do business man or the country gentleman who has not a course of his own, the ideal proposition is to join a club where one can become a stockholder. Of courses, only the very wealthy can have private courses, and they are not much fun Golf is not a passing fad, and there is not a likelihood that anything will be lost in the investment.

If the club is managed well and the ground is purchased at a reasonable figure—I need not be a bargain—membership in such a club is an asset. It should only take a few years to make the investment first class and marketable at a much higher figure than it was purchased.

Clubs where the members are permitted to share in the ownership of the property are popular now all over the country. Of course, there will always be the public links golfer who cannot afford a club, and without him golf would suffer considerably. This is where four-fifths of the golfers start. They get their taste for the game on municipal courses, and, when they become congested, they seek private links.

Municipal courses are common now in almost any city of any size in the country. Some of the largest have two or three links for golfers who cannot afford to pay the prices demanded at some of the high-class country clubs. Thus will come when even the towns of 5,000 or 6,000 inhabitants will support a public links just as they do in Scotland. The people will think no more of it than they do a baseball park. Golf is popular in America, but it is only in its infancy. The high cost of the game has reached the top of the hill, and we can look for more reasonable prices in the future.

TUOHEY AMAZES FANS WITH BIG BILL

[illegible] fans, accustomed as they are to the programs arranged by Promoter Tuohey for his all-star carnivals, are amazed at the immense size of the card arranged for Mechanics Building next Monday night. It is topped by the match between Strangler Lewis and Dick Daviscourt, with Jimmy Londos and Joe Folk running second and Waldek Zbiasko and Gertsman, the crack Belgian, also to display their wares. Getting Daviscourt was a rare piece of luck under the circumstances, as Dick was headed toward the Coast. Tuohey has secured Lewis, but had no opponent for him. Daviscourt's manager in New York said that he would cancel all dates and shoot Dick against the Strangler if the latter would consent.

"You're on," said Tuohey, and thus one of the strongest and well balanced programs the veteran promoter has ever offered was given the finishing touches, with a headliner which stands out big even among other big events.

VAN HEUSEN PATENTED
the World's Smartest COLLAR

THE VAN HEUSEN Collar is the greatest innovation in men's dress since the old, high, stiff-brimmed beaver gave place to the modern, soft felt hat.

No other collar can compare with the VAN HEUSEN, because no other collar is made from the same seamless fabric.

And men wear the VAN HEUSEN Collar for the same reasons that they wear the soft felt hat: it is better looking and more comfortable.

The trim dignity of the VAN HEUSEN is not starched nor ironed into it, but woven and tailored into it.

The VAN HEUSEN Collar is as trim as a Tuxedo; as stylish as it is starchless; and as correct as it is comfortable.

Men who scorned soft collars wear it and praise it. And fastidious men—men who like a slight suggestion of the formal, or the severe, in their attire—are fast friends of the VAN HEUSEN Collar.

Nine styles and heights, quarter sizes from 13½ to 18, price fifty cents. Will outwear a half-dozen ordinary collars.

If your dealer cannot supply you with the VAN HEUSEN Collar and the VAN CRAFT Shirt (a soft white shirt with the VAN HEUSEN Collar attached) write us for address of one that can.

Ancient Egyptians' Year

THE ancient Egyptians' year, from which ours is derived, had a natural beginning. It always commenced on the day when Sirius and the sun rose together. The temples of Egypt were really observatories, built to face this or that star as it rose.

IN BORROWED PLUMES

BUT THEY WERE PLUMES OF OLD VINTAGE

A Short Story of a Little Mistake That Changed the Course of Two Lives and Did Much Heart Damage

By N. V. Finley

MILLICENT PASFORD'S features, though not beautiful, were sweet and womanly. Her figure was shapeless and her hair, though it had wonderful possibilities, was badly arranged. She moved with neither grace nor charm. Her clothes were hopelessly unattractive, and the little wife realized it, and longed with all her heart to be one-half as smart and lovely as the charming young woman across the aisle.

As the train rumbled into the station, Letty Leffingwell smiling ly addressed her wistful-eyed Pullman neighbor.

"Well, we're here at last! I'm stopping at the Beach Hotel, and I hope we'll see each other again!"

As she prepared to dress for dinner, Letty could not forget the sweet face of the sad-eyed wife as she met the indifferent ones of her well-groomed husband.

The maid laid out her blue dinner gown, as directed. Her negligee hung limply on a chair.

"But—why—where in the name of goodness did you get this dress?" laughed the astonished Letty, as she held up a pale blue silk evening gown made hideous by panniers and bunches of coarse lace.

Marie looked skeptical. "Aren't those your bags, madam?"

"Those two aren't!" cried the other in bewilderment. "My pretty new gowns, my shoes, my jewels!"

Chuckling with good-natured amusement, Miss Leffingwell retired early. After all, there was no need for uneasiness. The simple little wife would return the things at once. Doubtless she was more put out than Letty.

Hastily donning a severe white linen suit, with a skirt that flared where it should have been straight, she marched out in quest of her clothes. She flushed as she met the frank stares in the lobby. The hem of her skirt fell a good deal below her ankles.

"There goes Miss 1914!" said a masculine voice rather loudly.

The Dinner Gown

That evening she donned the hateful blue gown. It was twelve inches too long, and the sleeves came to her elbows, but Miss 1914 wore it like a haughty princess. And the princess was beginning to enjoy herself.

"I see Miss 1914 tonight," said Richard Fenners, as he perched on the veranda railing. "You know, there's something about that girl I like!"

"Fish," said Tom Andrews, who was the original woman hater, "all you have to do to win a woman is to pretend to be a cynic and none-what of a brute, say hateful things, make her loathe you, and——"

"Oh, is that what?" thought Letty angrily, not so very far away.

"I can't imagine Miss 1914 being full of pricks," defended Fenners dreamily.

"She's a lady born and bred. Laugh if you will, I intend to know her better. Did you ever see such eyes?"

"Not since I left New York!" admitted Andrews drily.

In her willow chair behind a large palm tree, Letty's heart seethed with indignation. How she hated Tom Andrews! What egotistic, overbearing creatures men were, anyway! There was a tender spot in her heart for Fenners, and she absolutely adored the manner in which he defended her, but as for that unnecessary good-looking Andrews—how she loathed him! She experienced a fierce joy in watching the other woman's clothes now!

In the days that followed Letty saw much of Richard and Tom. Richard was her humble slave. Tom, she observed, held himself haughtily aloof and looked skeptical.

Letty's holiday was drawing to a close. She had had the best time in her life. She had received three proposals, and felt that she was on the verge of another.

"You're like a lovely magnet, Miss Letty," cried Fenners, his soul in his eyes, "how do you do it?"

"All you have to do to interest a man is to pretend to be a cynic and say hateful things and act haughty, and he will be eating out of your hand in a week!" said she coolly, raising a pair of defiant eyes to Tom. The original woman hater flushed.

"Now you see," said Tom, after she had gone. "Didn't I tell you? Bah, she's like all the rest! Fraudes! cheatal Bars!"

On the stairs he paused to pick up a sheet of notepaper. "My darling Miss Leffingwell" caught his eye. Being more interested in that young lady than he cared to admit he read boldly on:

The Letter

My Darling Miss Leffingwell:

If you could only know the happiness you've given me in this brief two weeks, perhaps you would not judge me too harshly. I opened the gripe that fate put into my hands, and was tempted. That first night at dinner I wore your lovely blue gown. The maid did my hair. My husband was amazed at the transformation. He thought it was all a glorious surprise—for him!

After that—how could I tell him? Dear girl, I have tasted paradise for the first time in years. I have succeeded in finding a modiste who can do a great real for plain women. She has copied some of your frocks. Of course you will be angry, but perhaps some day I can repay you. I have returned everything intact. God bless you.

MILLICENT PASFORD.

"Miss Leffingwell, I found this on the stairs. I read it because I think fate intended that I should. You're a—a brick!" said Tom fifteen seconds later.

"A 1914 brick!" asked Letty sarcastically.

"No, a regular brick!" said Tom quietly. "Miss Leffingwell—Letty —I can't let you go out of my life like this. I want to know you better!" The original woman-hater seemed to have vanished.

Letty proved, however, that the frail sex are by no means susceptible to flowery speech. It was all of three months before she said "Yes!"

FOSTERING HOME LOVE

—By Loretto C. Lynch—

"AND what preparations are you making for your home to be?" I asked the Engaged Girl.

"Why," she smiled "I'm not going to have a home—we are going to live at a hotel. In the first place, keeping house is SUCH a bother, and to tell you the truth, I don't know a single thing about it."

Here was a fine girl. She had ideals, was well educated, says that she had never been brought to realize that the strength of a nation depends in great part upon its homes. And because she did not know "a single thing" about homemaking, was perfectly content, but as for that unnecessary good-looking Andrews—how she loathed him! She experienced a fierce joy in watching the other woman's clothes now!

In the days that followed Letty saw much of Richard and Tom. Richard was her humble slave. Tom, she observed, held himself haughtily aloof and looked skeptical.

The Girl Who Defied Dan the Archer

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1922, by International Feature Service, Inc.

YOU remember in the picture recently she defied the archer Dan and even laughed at him, and today you see the result. There she lies, pierced to the heart by one of the deadly arrows with which he threatened her. And he's laughing in triumph. She never had a chance, and he knew it, but that's the way with all doubters. She's pierced to the heart, and the funny part of it is going to thank Dan for it and hold him up as a model all her life.

BOBBY AND HIS PA

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

MA was telling Pa last nite what the ladies lerned at the ladies' club, they lerned about mesmery.

You may not know it, sed Ma to Pa, but mesmery is vast-ly aided by the use of jingels, sed Ma. Did you know that you cud romember with jingels, sed Ma?

I did, sed Pa, & I also know, sed Pa, that there is a lot of jingels wich I wud like to forgit, sed Pa, sum of our moast pop-u-lar songs, sed Pa. I can never forgit, sed Pa, them lines wich dommy-natin my mesmery, sed Pa.

You made me what I am today.

I hoap yure satisfied.

You dragged & dragged me down until

The sole within me died, etc., sed Pa.

I never liked that song, sed Ma, it always sounded kind of whiney to me, sed Ma.

Whiney is etsy, sed Pa. It is such songs like them, sed Pa, wich we wud fane forgit, Pa sed.

But there 'e sum buetiful lines in sum songs, sed Ma, wich it is ever a pleasur for to remember, Ma sed, like for instans, sed Ma, For the hart wich has truly loved never forgets

& as truly loves on to the close As the sun-flour turns on her gol wen he sets

The saim look wich she gave wen he runs, sed Ma.

Well, sed Pa, after all is sed & did, sed Pa, it seems to me that most married ladies needs no training for thare mommerys, Pa sed. Moast of them remembers too much, sed Pa, especshully of the little human mistakis wich is made by thare human husbands, sed Pa. It is that quality of thares, sed Pa, wich makis mesmery dangerous, sed Pa. Did you ever notice what a grate mesmery I have, sed Pa.

Often, sed Ma. You have such a grate mesmery, sed Ma, that you never, never forgit to throw A bokay at yure noabel self, sed Ma.

But I remember moar sweeter things than that, sed Pa. I remember the butiful days of our court-ship sed I'a. They loom up in my mesmory like A diamond in A 10 cent stoar, sed Pa.

You dear old preshus, sed Ma.

That is me, a dear old preshus, sed Pa. I was born 2 late, sed I, I have lived true to my person-nality, sed Pa. It taiks a noabel & brite woman like what you is sed Pa said to Ma, to see the true greatness in me, sed Pa.

I guess Ma and Pa are getting pritty strong on the hot air lately I will have to tell them a mouthful if they keep it up much longer. I will close with a poem:

Heer & there & everywhere
We find our share
Of the old hot air & sum to spare.

French Macaroni

While one package of macaroni is being boiled in salted water until soft, cut five tender stalks of celery into small pieces, one green pepper put through food chopper, one-quarter pound of cheese cut small, three-quarters cup fresh or canned mushrooms cut in quarters (these may be omitted). Put all of the foregoing excepting macaroni into dish. Slice two medium-sized onions and brown in bacon drippings or butter. Drain macaroni and add to other ingredients. Add to this one can of prepared tomato soup diluted with one-third can water. Mix well and add the articles first prepared. Blend together and serve piping hot. This, with dessert and a beverage makes a meal. It is best to use a large pan when frying onions to avoid equaling when mixing all articles together at the last.

Anecdotes of the Famous

Romance centres round the life of Mr. J. H. Blackburne, the veteran chess player of Manchester, who has just passed his eighteth birthday.

In his youth he was employed in a bank there. He then devoted himself to his favorite game, and when he toured the country his brilliance soon found him out, for he was hailed as a chess genius.

Mr. Blackburne, who has met such wizards as Canabianca, Paulsen and Lasker, recently played twenty games simultaneously in London, winning nine, drawing ten and being beaten in one by a lady.

The life story of Miss Helen Keller, an American woman, whom Roosevelt described as "the world's most wonderful woman," affords a striking example of how perseverance may triumph over the greatest handicaps.

An attack of fever when a child rendered her deaf, dumb and blind. Instead of bowing to the inevitable she battled with her afflictions, with RA. honors. She learned Latin, Greek, German and French, and mastered music and sculpture.

Her greatest of all her achievements was her victory over her sense of speech. She would endure her fingers on a friend's throat and try patiently to reproduce in her own mouth the sensations she felt. One day she spoke five words. They were "I am not dumb now!"

Browning's verses obviously did not live in his own memory. In his recent book, "Memories and Notes," Sir Sidney Colvin says he remembers with what amused gusto the poet related one day how a lady friend had been reading out certain verses, and how he slapped his thigh (a very characteristic action, by the way, and said "By Jove, that's fine!" how then she asked him who wrote them, and he could not say; and how surprised he was when she had told him they were his own.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

ROMANCE OF NEWLY WEDDED LIFE

Bertha Tells Anne of Her Husband and What Has Been Going On at the Daltons

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1922, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"YOU think I'm good enough?" gasped Carlotta.

"Good enough?" I repeated "You're one of the sanest, biggest women I've ever known, Carlotta. You're splendid. I'd love to see a man I respect and admire at your side. I'd love to."

"There's a 'but' in your voice," Carlotta interposed. "Tell me what you mean, Anne, I can almost fancy your saying that you'd love to see it —BUT. What is the mental reservation?"

We'd been eating dinner as we talked, and if I needed further proof of Carlotta's grave earnestness, it must have been afforded by the fact that she permitted dish after dish to be carried away practically untasted.

"Don't call my slight hesitancy a mental reservation," I protested. "I want to see you happy. I believe you'll make the man who wins you happy. I know you're modest and sweet, too. But you're honest—and —and not a coquette, do I'm worry-in—for fear you'll be too direct."

"For fear I'll run after him!" asked Carlotta

A New Arrival

"Not that," I affirmed. "Not that at all. Only that you'll give too freely—with the same simple honesty you've shown me."

"And don't you think Anthony Norreys is big enough and honest enough to meet such giving hand-way?" mused Carlotta.

"He's a man," I began, with a twinkle at my increasing knowledge of the foibles of the masculine person, "who is a little boy grown up."

A discreet cough from the doorway interrupted me.

"There's a person here to see you, Mrs. Harrison," interrupted the maid, with that anothery sorts servants show each other. "She said it was Bertha and not to disturb your dinner on her account. I left her on the front steps while seeing what to do about her."

"Have her in at once," cried Carlotta, with the touch of arrogance I've seen her show only when protecting the under dog. "Please bring her right into the library and ask her if she's had her dinner."

The maid flounced out with a very superior air. I turned to Carlotta, with the amusement mingled with admiration for the way she has of cutting the Gordian knots without waiting to see if they've been used to tie frayed and broken strings.

"You've sent your haughty Mabelle to wait on my good friend and ex-cook, Bertha," I chuckled.

"She'll probably give notice when she finds out," laughed Carlotta in response. Then the weariness which had made her face so pale and drawn came down over it again like a white shade.

"Will you mind if I go up to my room now?" she asked.

I nodded acquiescence, and Carlotta started from the room. At the door she stopped and returned for the bit of yellow paper I'd left lying next my place. With a smile that was half apologetic, she folded it and slipped it in the bosom of her gown.

There was a great deal I wanted to say to Carlotta. I could not be sure that the right moment would ever again offer itself. But the whirligig of fate had carried us by our opportunity. So I turned and went to the room where Bertha was waiting for me.

"You're an angel, Mrs. Harrison, to see me right away," cried Bertha, jumping to her feet and seizing my hands effusively in her toil-worn ones. "But—I couldn't think what to do, and I knew the best person to come to for advice was you. I hope you didn't disturb yourself at dinner."

"I had finished dinner, Bertha," I replied. "But I'm afraid you've had none, so don't you want me to have Zabelle bring you something?"

As I spoke I visualized Slim Darrow's face on the day when the detective led him away and he turned with a haunting glance of accusation and vengefulness to stare after the car in which Lyons was driving Tom Mason and me away from the scene.

"It is and it isn't about Lyons," replied Bertha, setting my fears at rest with her first words. "He doesn't know yet, and I don't want he should. It would be bad enough if Mrs. Dalton had to know the rest of it, as if what that Jiedwig told her wasn't a-plenty.

Bertha Explains

"Let me get this straight, Bertha," I commented. "And so you must begin at the beginning of your story. What you've just said leads to actually tell me anything, you know."

"Yes'm, I know," grinned Bertha. "I was letting off steam. But now I'll get to the facts. Well, I've quarrelled pretty bad with that Hedwig but brought along when you came to Dreamwold. There's been ructions between us ever since she came. And Mrs. Dalton at first always sided with me. So that made it worse, as Hedwig always got terribly fond of the missus and being so devoted didn't like to think me the favorite.

"Now I think it's got where Mrs. Dalton has kind of took a fancy to Hedwig, like you do to a faithful dog that would lie down and die for you. You know how Mrs. Dalton is—awful high-spirited, but tender hearted, too.

"Of course, seeing Mrs. Dalton getting fonder of Hedwig all the time didn't tickle me any. It's natural to want to be liked. And then the Daltons got to coming out to Dreamwold to week-ends in Mr. Norrey's car, and of course my George he got to see them, and I was even extra glad to see him, having felt so left out in the cold due to Hedwig's taking a fancy to Hedwig.

"Maybe I wasn't at cautious as I might have been, but when Hedwig's got hold of it that there's something between Lyons and me, she's a awful spiteful animal, sending something wrong, she threatens to go to Mrs. Dalton and tell her——

"Tell her what?" I interrupted, thinking it high time some concise news was brought into Bertha's narrative.

"Tell her things ain't just as they ought to be between Lyons and me," the woman flung out defiantly.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Feb. 9.—The following is presented as a reply to many letters which come to the writer of this column from time to time, some critical, more often from ambitious young men who admire the achievements of leaders in our business and financial world, and who want to know something about how these men got their start.

* * *

In America the workman of yesterday is the capitalist of today. And the workman of today will be the capitalist of tomorrow. Have no doubt on that score. How often do we hear "the workman nowadays hasn't a chance." Hasn't he? Let's see, now, just who is who and who was who. Who are these terrible capitalists, anyway? Where did they come from? Were they born that way or did they make themselves? Were they once upon a time ordinary workmen like the rest of us? Did they start from scratch? Let's begin with the (reputedly) richest man on earth. Was John D. Rockefeller born with a golden spoon in his mouth? Was his brother, William, also enormously wealthy? No, John D. was poor as a church mouse and borrowed a modest sum on which to start business on his own account. How about Andrew Carnegie? Did he not begin in an engine room at a dollar or so a week and have to slave like a grown to eke out a sleder existence for his mother? No silver spoon there, not even a steel one, only a horn one.

The greatest industry in the United States is railroading. The first railroad giant of this country was Commodore Vanderbilt. He, as all the world knows, was not reared on the lap of luxury. James J. Hill had neither purse nor influence when he set out to fulfill the injunction decreed upon fallen Adam, but he worked like a Trojan, transforming wildernesses into fruitful farms and making two blades of grass grow where only weeds and waste luxuriated before, and thus earning for himself the title "The Grand Old Man of the Northwest." And what not Edward H. Harriman the son of a poor, underpaid minister, and did he not do his own capital making? Call the roll of other great railroad men, dead or alive, and you will find that almost every one of them began at the very bottom. What of such notable presidents as Underwood of the Erie, Howard Elliott of the Northern Pacific, Read of the Pennsylvania, Kruttschnitt of Southern Pacific, Truesdale of Lackawanna and a score of others? Not one of them was born great or had greatness thrust upon him. They have won it by the sweat of their brows and activity of their brains.

Not one of our steel magnates was born rich. Gary, the head of the steel corporation, was a none too opulent Illinois lawyer, and President Farrell, after starting as a day laborer, won his spurs as a steel salesman. Schwab, "the greatest steel man of them all," according to Carnegie, was once as poor as he now is rich. He is the largest stockholder and dominator of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

Theodore N. Vail, the genius who amazed Christendom by his building up of the most wonderful telephone system in the world, a system beside which all others are Lilliputian, had to start from scratch not once, but oftener. No switchboard operator was ever kept busier than he. Was no Edison as scant of cash at the outset as the proverbial inventor, he begged his first breakfast in New York. Henry Ford, the automobile wizard, recently recalled that less than twenty years ago he couldn't get credit to buy a Thanksgiving turkey, now he is rated as second only to Rockefeller in point of wealth. James B. Duke, the tobacco king, made his own gigantic fortune. George H. Cortelyou, head of Consolidated Gas Company of New York, is an ex-stenographer. Henry P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Company, used to work on a farm during school vacations. He began to earn his own living about the age gilded youths are leaving the nursery. Thomas W. Lamont, of the same firm, is an ex-reporter.

Turning to merchant princes, did not John Wanamaker start as an errand boy in a book store? Horace B. Claflin, founder of one of the biggest wholesale dry goods firms in the country, began very humbly. Macy, Strauss, Gimbel and others names will spring to mind.

* * *

No, the race today is not to the born-rich. Inherited wealth cannot keep a brainless son at the head of any huge enterprise. Brains, not a bursting bankroll, form the all necessary qualifications. Pampered sons of multi-millionaires are more often ornaments than useful cogs in the industrial wheels. There is no room in the feverish struggle for interfering figureheads.

* * *

The winner is the industrious, intelligent worker. He is the capitalist of tomorrow just as he is the head of almost every industry today. There is lots of room at the top. And the pathway is clear for all. There are more big jobs awaiting really big men today than there are big men awaiting jobs.

RAIL AND STEEL ISSUES UP IN LAST HOUR

Motors Have Good Tone All Day; Coppers Quiet but Heavy at Finish

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

While some stocks were at their lowest for the day in the last hour, the New York market closed with a rally and with gains in a large majority. Rails, especially low priced ones, were highest in the afternoon. But the final feature was the strength of steels.

U. S. Steel was up nearly 3 points, and Bethlehem B more than 2 at the end. Coppers were quiet, but had a heavy tone. The price of red metal is being shaded. Transactions in the stock market approximated 700,000 shares for the session.

Very little change occurred in the United Drug issue, and at noon most issues were up a little, and there were substantial gains for a few. The receivership application sent Columbia Graphophone preferred to a record low and the common issue of this corporation to 10¢, previous lowest. There was an upward movement during the noon period and afternoon, with rails, steels and Mexican Petroleum figuring in the advance. Gains in this movement varied from fractions to four points. Trading was of greatest volume on rallies. Call money opened at 5 per cent. Foreign exchange was firm, demand sterling rising to $4.39 before reacting.

TRADING WAS TAME.

Irregularity marked the price movement at the opening, but the market had a good undertone and gains were the rule early in the first hour, and the list was steady during the latter part of it. But trading was tame and the professional operators who did the most of it, seemed to be awaiting new developments. The price range was narrow. Studebaker was the leader and advanced more than a point. Other active issues were Marine Preferred, Pan American Petroleum, Pierce Arrow preferred, Carson Hill and Davison Chemical. After receding more than a point American Tobacco rallied and showed a point gain. Motors were the strongest group. There was no weak one up to mid-morning. Call money rates were less active and specialties not so prominent. Short selling was resumed at the start, but the extension of this interest was checked by evidence that the market could absorb a good deal of stock at current quotations. Liberty bonds were a little higher.

FEAR TRANSFER TAX.

Sentiment was unfavorably affected by Washington reports that a transfer tax for stocks and bonds would be one of the methods of raising bonus money. It is said by financiers that this will not only be oppressive to stock markets, but an adverse influence in other respects. James J. Phelan of Hornblower & Weeks has wired a protest to the Massachusetts delegation in Congress as individuals, stating among other things: "It is nothing less than unfair to overtax in this manner any one industry. In addition it will upset the entire financial machinery of the country at a time when business is laboring under as many adverse conditions as it can now carry. In a word, the result anticipated will not be accomplished, as trading in securities will be so prohibited by such a tax that the amount derived from the tax will be found entirely inadequate."

Sugar a Cheap Food

Sugar is not only one of the most nutritious foods, but about the cheapest. On the basis of what it is costing consumer now, he could live on $30 a year if all other edibles cost him as little. It is stated that a pound of sugar develops 1,860 units of energy, and the 2.3 ounces of sugar which each American consumes on an average in a day provide about 17.7 per cent. of the required daily total of 2,500 food units.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Feb. 9.—Cotton opened firm at the beginning of business today at an advance of 4 to 24 points on a favorable showing by the Bartlett market. Favorable factors were: Improved advices from Manchester a broadening demand for the spot article in that district, active investing by shorts, covering by trade interests, and a generally bullish feeling in the trade. The old crop months were maintained at the start and bear sales were more general than for a number of days. Liverpool was among the early sellers here, while there also was rather heavy selling for profits by some of the older bears. The first prices were: March, 22.40; May, 22.60; July, 20.85; October, 19.30; December, 19.52 offered.

Soviet Gold Coming

Stockholm, Sweden, Feb. 9.—Gold valued at from $25,000,000 to $31,200,000 arrived here today from Soviet Russia. Most of it eventually will be sent to America.

Vast company holdings challenge the imagination. They contain untold possibilities of discovery and development.
Of the companies represented on the New York Curb Exchange, one company alone has acreage exceeding that of Massachusetts, Delaware and Rhode Island combined. Several control properties larger than a single State.
Many companies whose assets at first seemed mainly immense undeveloped properties have later made these holdings sources of wealth for their stockholders.
As "information headquarters" for stocks traded on the New York Curb Exchange Jones & Baker distribute news bulletins, printed reports, quotations, and informative booklets.
The quality of the service rendered by this brokerage organization is reflected in the fact that nearly 40% of their new customers are introduced by old customers.

$700,000,000 from Nevada
—"the Land that God Forgot"

That is exactly what every traveler remarks who journeys through the State of Nevada.

And after a day spent on a fast-moving train, passing through nearly a thousand miles of sagebrush, the conclusion appears logical and reasonable.

True—from a car window the land along the line of the railroad looks dry and nonproductive and not a fit abode for man nor beast.

The bleak mountain sides look even more inhospitable, barren and worthless.

The more you see of Nevada the less you think it is worth and before you are out of the State you estimate its value at about thirty cents.

Wrong—and I have the United States Government to back me up with the facts and figures.

Nevada, a Rich State

In precious metals that need not be advertised, Nevada has given to the world more than $700,000,000.00.

This, I rise to remark, is some contribution from a sun-baked, wind-swept, sage-covered state.

Judging from past performances, I have a firm conviction that the supply has not been exhausted and that her rock-ribbed hills will give forth gold and silver in greater abundance and with a prodigality never imagined by the most optimistic fortune hunter.

A New Mine Shaft

I know that, here in Goldfield, the Deep Mines Company, owning more than 600 acres located in the very heart of the district, is sinking an enormous three compartment shaft to a depth of 2400 feet.

At this moment a hole 5x17 feet is down more than 1000 feet, with machinery and equipment on the ground to complete the job.

More than 12,000 shareholders are kept advised as to what their officers, engineers and workmen are doing to make a mine that will again make Goldfield a household word.

The company is not in debt, has in excess of $80,000.00 cash in the treasury and, barring a cataclysm that will turn Nevada on end, the job is going to be finished.

Banker Assures Work

I can say this because the richest man in the State, who is likewise its biggest banker, has assured me the great shaft I mentioned in a preceding paragraph, is going down 2400 feet.

It is going to be sunk whether another share of stock is sold or not, and when that depth is reached, according to the best engineering talent and foremost geologists who have studied the formations, there should be a mine that will bring joy to the hearts of 12,000 interested stockholders.

I am going to urge you to buy Deep Mines stock at 12½ cents a share, because of the immensity of its holdings; the character of the men in charge of its affairs; its exceptional equipment; the positive assurance that the work undertaken will be completed and because it is located in the section that produced more than one hundred million dollars.

Opportunity Beckons

I urge you to buy because at Butte, Cripple Creek, Virginia City, Grass Valley and Tonopah, where the mines were sunk to depth, the reward was such that stocks that had been sold for 50 cents a share went to $14.00.

I believe implicitly in the property and in the people conducting its physical operations and managing its affairs—to such an extent that I am urging clients who have been buying securities from me in other enterprises to acquire all the stock in the Deep Mines they can afford to carry.

According to my conception of the situation the price, 12½ cents per share, is a ridiculously low quotation and will not be held at that figure for long.

Your order should be placed at once and I suggest you give the matter the attention its importance warrants.

This is a speculation pure and simple. But it is a real shaft, going down deeper every day, in the center of a mining community, where a hundred million dollars has already been extracted. If gold is found in quantity, as it has in mines of less depth, then your investment should yield very large returns.

I know the men who are officers of Deep Mines Company—know them well. They are sincere, earnest engineers of long experience in mining.

You are urged to have your banker or wholesale merchant get a commercial report from Dun or Bradstreet on Deep Mines Company, Goldfield, Nevada. Read it carefully. Learn who the men are, at the head of the concern, and what they are doing—then invest a hundred or a thousand dollars.

HARRY GILMOUR,
Goldfield, Nevada.

REAL OPTIMISM APPARENT IN BUSINESS

Economic Affairs on Much Firmer Basis Than They Were 6 Months Ago

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—The country is talking to itself no longer but to dinks on beautiful symbols which does not exist; the salesman can move over toward the side of pure truth in recommending his wares; the banker can relax some of the knots in his vermin and open the faucet of his loan tank a little wider; and the prairie wind should soften its moan—economic conditions hold out some real promise of improvement.

You don't have to apologize for things nearly as much as you did six months ago. Affairs are at a point where there is at least fighting ground, which is more than can be said of that time.

Readjustment is not coming so rapidly as heretofore because so much of it has already come. The banks are talking less of their duty to carry those who may happen to be worth carrying or to refrain from lending where there is danger of another purchase by the borrower.

SEES BOOM IN WHEAT.

One may cite two or three features that have appeared in Chicago. A Board of Trade man asked if he was to sell on wheat rebound. "What will up rapidly after it reaches $1.50 bushel." This prognosticator is active member in one of the most important firms in Chicago, and this prediction is evidently based on a careful study of the situation, for this house actually handles the grain and not merely the eighths and quarters in the market.

Related to the trade in American grain are the prices of sterling and the Continental exchanges, which again opened the eyes of observers with wonder when the English checks passed $4.38 yesterday. One expert on being asked the cause swept away all the elaborate learned explanations and remarked crisply, "No bills in the market."

Certainly there are few offerings by Chicago exporters. Doubtless we may look for a still lower balance of trade in our favor when we get the office in returns of the foreign commerce for January and February. There is a hardship to many people in the restriction of exchange, and modified as to other countries, but we cannot fail to remember that restoration of the party of the moneys of the various nations is a prime need of the world.

Of more immediate local importance than any of these things is the trouble in the building situation of Chicago. The associations of employers and the citizens' committee have come into the open shop and are acting on that platform, not refusing to employ a man because he belongs to a union, but accepting anybody who can do the work. A man identified with some of the larger operations in this city stated that of ten unions only three remain in hostility to the program laid out by Judge Landis, also that carpenters and common laborers are tearing up their union cards.

ARMS PARLEY RESULTS.

These are a few of the features which the average citizen sets out a good case for improvement, or at least promise of improvement, and the picture is embellished by a spirit quite different from that of a few months ago. Frankly the spirit is due to the bravery of stocks in moving up, but even that is not without a cause. Confidence is coming along gradually and that at a time of the year when the Spring is approaching, a season which normally brings an enlargement of trade.

The same influence is operating in one degree and another else here in the country and in the world due to the abatement of fear—fear not only of economic disturbance, but of international political trouble.

The results of the Arms Conference have had a tonic effect on the nerves of Americans as well as Europeans which probably is under estimated. It somehow seems as if the world were about to start doing the tremendous amount of work it has to

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Wednesday's stock market contained two trading features of interest, one consisting of profit taking in the industrials and another of a buying demonstration in the rails. It should not be assumed from this that all of the industrials were weak, for in a few issues, such as Studebaker and Chandler, short spurts seem to be in an uncomfortable position. Generally speaking, however, the tendency in this quarter of the market was reactionary, although losses were confined largely to fractions. Examples of exceptional weakness were furnished by Atlantic Gulf, U. S. Food Products, International Harvester, and a few other issues.

THE profit-taking in the industrials probably was facilitated by the strength of the rails, as holders of stocks were inclined to regard the activity of the railroad shares more in terms of a movement to aid distribution elsewhere. Northern Pacific established a new high level for the year, and there was good buying of St. Paul preferred. The gains were not fully maintained, however, and some of the rails even closed at a loss for the day.

THE unsettled tone of the market, for it may be justly called such, was due in large measure to reports from Washington to the effect that the House Ways and Means Committee favored a tax of 1½ per cent, 2 per cent, on stock and bond transfers, for the purpose of raising a portion of the soldiers' bonus requirements. It was authoritatively stated that the chairman of the committee opposed the tax because he believed it would be "popular," and that after the meeting of the committee, the suggestion to extend the tax to transactions in cotton and grain contracts had met with favor.

THE tone of the weekly review of the Iron Age was somewhat more encouraging, especially as it made note of larger buying by the railroads, with additional orders for both cars and rails. Sterling made a new high level, the explanation for this last spurt being furnished by the decision of Australia to repay war advances amounting to more than $400,000,000.

PROFESSIONAL activity shifted from the industrial list to the railroads. A movement in the St. Paul issues was a reflection of the speculative accumulation which has been in progress. A well-known professional who long has been absent from the floor of the Exchange took active part in advancing the quotation of the preferred stock more than three points and the common more than two. While the rails and Studebaker were being advanced there was heavy selling of other industrials. This selling brought about great irregularity during on weakness just before the close.

CHANDLER MOTORS just equalled its recent high at 65¾. It, too, felt the result of profit taking sales, and continued activity for the day was due to covering brought a smart rally on the short side. It is understood that the short interest in Chandler is larger now than at any previous time, but it is doubtful if many of the shorts will be driven to cover at once, in the opinion of firms who have watched the trading in the stock closely. It is also said, so, too, there is an unwieldy long following, and the shorts will act as a buffer in the event of a decline, brokers say.

THE advance in the rails today was interesting to the market students, as indicating that the movement in these securities, rather than for the immediate present. The advance in stock prices in this month is due to the bravery of stocks in moving up, but even that is not without a cause. Confidence is coming along gradually and that at a time of the year when the Spring is approaching, a season which normally brings an enlargement of trade.

The same influence is operating in one degree and another else here in the country and in the world due to the abatement of fear—fear not only of economic disturbance, but of international political trouble.

TRADING DULL ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

Local Market Narrow and Irregular; Curb List Shows Strength in Quiet Morning

The price movement was mixed in Boston during the morning. Many issues were unchanged on first sales and trading was narrow. The most active stocks were Carson Hill and Eastern Manufacturing. Carson Hill advanced 2¼ and the other issue gained a point. Speculation in trading issues were dull and irregular. New England rails were neglected. For the list as a whole fluctuations were very small and the market inspired no interest. Losses of 1 and New River 2. Calumet & Hecla dropped 1, Atlas Tack 1¼ and Amoskeag 2.

The tone was heavy in the afternoon. Copper Range, United Fruit, Boston & Maine 2 and New England Telephone were down a point. Amoskeag increased its morning loss to 4. Eastern Manufacturing, Mergenthaler and Massachusetts Gas advanced a point.

CURB TRADING QUIET.

Trading on the Curb was dull but gains predominated on this exchange. Leaders were Bagdad, Boston & Montana, Eureka and Verde Central. All opened unchanged and stayed so during the forenoon, with the exception of Eureka, which gained a cent lower and later showed a cent gain at 24 cents. Other advances were Mutual 3 cents at 33 cents, New Rilla 1 cent at 73 cents, Palisade 3 cents at 15 cents, Nature Boy ⅛ at 7⅜ and United Verde Extension 56 at 57¾. Among losses were Rockwell Green States 2 cents at 30 cents, Crystal 2 cents at 58 cents, Colorado Extension ⅛ at 1⅜ and Colorado Mining 1-16 at 1 1-16.

SALARY CUTS IN POSTOFFICE LOOKED FOR

Others to Get Pay Raised Following Visit of Inspectors From Washington

Changes in the supervisory personnel of the local postoffice staff, as well as cuts in some salaries and increases in others, together with many changes in present arrangements, are said to be underway in accordance with recommendations made by Postmaster Roland M. Baker today.

Baker announced that a commission of postal inspectors from Washington has been going over the Boston situation for three months and that recommendations resulting from their investigation might be expected shortly.

Baker denied reports that radical changes in the present personnel of the Boston postal district were contemplated. The salary changes were for the most part among the higher supervisory officials, but it was regarded likely that the inspectors would suggest a general reduction of expenses, and changes in service.

"These changes will not be general nor drastic," said Baker, in telling of the presence of the investigating commission in the city today.

"The inspectors have been at work considering a general reduction in expenses. I think recommendations will be made within a month or two, and if then approve them, will immediately take effect.

"The inspectors have discovered a number of minor irregularities in this district, for the most part of many years standing.

"No criticism has been made of the welfare activities for the benefit of the men established by myself.

"It is true that a searching examination of department heads has been made with the object of determining whether they could strengthen the general situation.

"I believe the reduction in salaries will affect but a very few individuals. A few will receive salary increases.

"There will be a general tightening up on expenditures for overtime and auxiliary wages."

Amount of Gold on Hand

According to official estimates at Washington the world's stock of monetary gold, including bullion held by government and banks, totals but $8,000,000,000, and out of this total the holdings of the United States at the beginning of this year amounted to $3,656,988,551.

Expect Small Decrease

In financial districts there is belief that the U. S. Steel Corporation will report unfilled orders decreased by 1,000,000 tons during January of from 10 to 12 per cent. It is believed that the shrinkage will be small is based upon reports that orders last month were about equal to shipments.

HIGH BUSINESS IDEAL URGED BY VORENBERG

Filene Advertising Director Also a Speaker at New York Session

By HARRY A. BENWELL.

New York, Feb. 9.—Ideals in business cannot be monopolized by the management in their offices, Felix Vorenberg, vice-president of the Filene-christ Company, Boston, informed the delegates to the eleventh annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association in three days' session at Hotel Pennsylvania here.

Ideals have to come from the management and go through the entire organization, Mr. Vorenberg said.

"It must come to a point," he said, "where only the people working for us and with us are merely being increased in their compensation from time to time, because they have been with us long enough without any increase, but it has got to come to a point where they will be increased because they deserve it; and on the other hand it has got to be independent by people behind counters that in order to gain that loyalty and in order to gain what I am going to preach now, they must give a full measure of compensation.

"FRILLS OF RETAILERS."

"The Massachusetts Commission on the Necessaries of Life recently referred to the frills of the retailers. When asked for an explanation they made the following interesting statement: That among the frills of retailers there was particularly the desire on their part of having high cost fixtures and the desire of allowing their customers to return merchandise, and also the desire to overcharge the one item of good will.

"Everybody who knows anything about retailers knows that they do represent a group of people where the good will is hardly ever fixed at its full value.

"Whether or not we can impose our good will in our own individual establishments, not for the purpose of charging it, but for the purpose of reducing by receiving the loyalty of all our own people behind and in front of the counters, and by so doing reducing the expense of our business, is the challenge that I would like to give to this gathering."

The second day of the three-day session was devoted to problems of distribution and of retail trade. The necessity of keeping prices down to levels at which the American people can afford to buy in their usual volume, affecting, as it does, both wholesale and retail fields of business, brought before the assemblage speakers ranking as national leaders in their special work.

VALUE OF ADVERTISING.

"What the Advertising Group Can Do," was outlined by Frank A. Black, advertising manager for William Filene's Sons Company, Boston. He is chairman of the advertising group. Frank Irving Fletcher, a well-known writer of advertising copy, discussed the topic, "Individuality in Advertising." "How to Interview a Business Manager," was taken up by Herbert J. Tily, general manager of Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia.

What Is the Moving Picture?

A Good Definition by John H. Kunsky—What Is YOUR Definition?

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

JOHN H. KUNSKY

The newest thing of great importance in the world is the MOVING PICTURE. It offers the most direct road into the human brain and thought. What it IS, what it DOES, what it is DESTINED to be—all those are questions important to everybody interested not merely in moving pictures, but in EDUCATION and in the human race of the future.

Some will say that the moving picture does instantaneously what the spoken or written word does slowly. Others will say that it is the actual presentation of life and emotion before the very eyes of the beholder.

A very good definition of the moving picture, as you will agree, is given by John H. Kunsky, who has just built the Capitol Theatre in Detroit, one of the most magnificent theatres anywhere.

Writing for the Detroit Times, Mr. Kunsky says:

WHAT A THEATRE DOES

By JOHN H. KUNSKY

Throughout history the human race, worried with its problems and its struggles for life, has sought relaxation, a change in the mind's work that means rest for the brain. The Greeks had their public baths, in which they met and talked, their public squares, their famous philosophical promenades.

The fighting Romans had their great arenas, in which men and beasts, and even ships on real water, fought to amuse the mob.

In the middle ages they had bear-baiting, their dog fights.

The Spaniards still have their bull fights.

The Americans, as a nation, far removed from the brutality of the gladiatorial arena, or the bull ring, find their mental rest and their mental pleasure in the theatre. And in the modern theatre and its work you find reflected the national personality, its interest, its culture.

WHAT IS THE MOVING PICTURE?

The question is not asked now as it once was, when men doubted whether "the movies," so called, would last.

The moving picture is SIMPLY THE SHORTEST ROAD INTO THE HUMAN BRAIN.

It enables the actor to display all of his skill, and the spectator instantly can see all that the story has to tell.

You can do with the moving picture all that can be done by the living actor, and a thousand times more.

If you say that the voice of the living actor is missing from the moving picture, I will admit it, and regret it. But I will answer that the absence of the actor's voice increases the activity of the spectator' imagination, and the work that goes on inside the mind of the spectator is worth infinitely more than the spoken word of any living actor.

To arouse thought, stimulate the imagination, transport vast audiences as by magic, to all parts of the world, is a great, useful and educating work. And that is what the moving picture does. An entire week of work by living actors and of close attention by spectators could not show as much as can be shown by the moving picture in two short hours.

Gigantic crowds of thousands such as no stage on earth could possibly hold are shown and brought before the crowds in absolute reality on the screen.

The moving picture makes it possible to take from life adventure, the heroism of the whole world, the quintessence of what the world has to offer.

It tells the story through the eye, through which all living beings receive their impressions most vividly.

The moving picture is the great educator, and no man can say what good is done to this and to other nations in which the moving picture with its dramatic story is part, as it were, of the daily mental diet.

Help Suppress Drug Traffic

Everyone Interested Should Attend Hearing Next Monday on Bills Recommended by the Governor and the Boston American

No one who is not suffering or has not suffered from the drug habit, or who has not seen someone near and dear to them suffer from it can understand how it blasts the life of its victim, and condemns him to go on for years through a living death, useless to themselves and to the world, and a burden to themselves and the world.

A realization of the tragedy from the irresponsible sale of drugs is leading to a determined effort all over the country and in many parts of the world to suppress this deadly traffic. Massachusetts has made considerable advance in legislation to prevent the indiscriminate scattering of this character-blasting drug. But experience has taught us that further legislation is necessary, and bills recommended by the Governor and by the Boston American are now before the Public Health Committee of the Legislature, which will hold a public hearing on them next Monday, February 13, at 10:30 a. m., in Room 436.

It will be an interesting and instructive hearing, at which the heads of our penal institutions are expected to give their experience. You should know that a large proportion of those in our prisons are victims of these terrible narcotics.

You ought to be interested in all plans for the suppression of the illicit sale of drugs and all plans to drag their victims out of the quicksands in which they sink down, down to abysmal degradation. If you are interested, come to this hearing, and especially if you have any knowledge on the subject come to the hearing and impart it to the committee.

Book on Congo a Sensation

PARIS, Feb. 9.—A voice from the starving and oppressed millions of the Congo, sponsored by a Paris publisher and crowned with the laurel wreath by the illustrious Goncourt Academy, is awakening tremendous interest in Europe, where, it is hinted, the author's revelations may provoke a new Congo scandal outdoing even that of the Belgian Congo twenty years ago.

The book is called Batouala and the author is a negro, Rene Maran, born in Martinique and educated in Bordeaux. His is the first book by a negro to be awarded a prize for literacy in France.

"Civilization, civilization, pride of Europeans, their excuse for the massacres of innocents!" the negro author exclaims in one passage.

"You build your kingdoms on corpses. Whatever you do and wherever you go your road is lined with lies.

"In subsequent books I shall tear the veil from these scenes of horror and injustice," he says.

"I shall tell how in certain regions, unhappy negroes are obliged to sell their wives at prices varying from 25 to 75 francs apiece! The voice of tortured thousands will speak through me!"

The book itself is of high literary merit and has been called one of the most noteworthy achievements of the century. It is the life story of one Batouala, a naked savage, inhabiting Oubangui-Chari, one of the four regions comprising the General Government of French Equatorial Africa.

With almost brutal frankness the author paints the family life and tribal customs of the Congo natives and their fear and hatred of the white conquerors.

Science in Footprints

By Garrett P. Serviss

WHAT is more thrilling than a footprint? The most agitating moment in the story of "Robinson Crusoe" is that when he sees the mysterious footprints in the sand. Perhaps the most exciting experience of the geologists is the rare one of coming upon great petrified footprints of prehistoric animals in rocks that were once mud floors for lagoons and marshes, or moist beaches on the shores of shallow seas. The study of such fossil footprints is a branch of the science of paleontology, and is called "ichnology," a word based on the Greek ichnos, meaning a track.

This earth has had inhabitants of whom we know nothing except the little that can be inferred from the tracks that they left behind them "on the sands of time." But that little is sometimes intimidating on account of the strange and formidable look of those adamantine footprints.

Had Backbones

The nameless awe that they inspire is heightened by the reflection that their makers were vertebrates, that is back-boned animals like ourselves, and not mere shapeless monsters of the dawn. They have an intelligence that we can interpret in their unseen acts whose consequences have been engraved in the rocks like a writing on the wall made by an invisible hand.

Professor Marsh once read a connected story from the footprints of huge, bipedal creatures in the sandstones of the Connecticut valley. It told how the animals, long seons ago, had waded among the rushes, or tramped over the soft beach, seeking their food; how one of them had sat down and so left an imprint that betrayed its dinosaurian form; how a little dinosaur had followed its gigantic progenitor, marking the yielding sand with what must have seemed to its mother tiny feet; how a boating storm of immense raindrops, or it might be hailstones, had burst over the place, pitting the beach with cup-shaped holes, and how the animals had suddenly run away, their haste being betrayed by their lengthened strides and the deeper impressions made by their toes in the wet sand.

As there were no marks to show the presence of great animals of a different species that might have chased the dinosaurs away, the inference could be drawn that they had fled from the storm. Possibly it was not so much the pelting from the suddenly darkened sky that alarmed them as the terrific reverberation of the thunder and the glare of the lightning striking through the clouds, or shattering a near-by tree.

A couple of years ago, being in the Connecticut valley, near Northampton, Professor William J. Miller took me to look at some similar tracks which had been found in recently uncovered sandstone strata. Some of these long-toed, two-legged creatures had feet more than a foot in length, and though they had doubtless been feeding, and, with short steps, slowly strolling onward, it was only by the utmost possible extension of his own, not very brief, stride, and by vigorously projecting himself from footmark to footmark, that Professor Miller was able to keep the dinosaur step.

A little searching on sandstone strata closer to the river, in a place where the last Spring floods had perhaps stripped off a thin surface layer of friable rock, brought to light more of these ancient tracks, and among them some whose small size (not larger than a hand) and generally delicate look seemed assurance that they had been left by the feet of baby dinosaurs born in the Connecticut valley in the far-off Triassic age, millions of years before, as Milton tells, "blissful Paradise" was planted "in the east of Eden."

Eight Prints Found

A few weeks ago Mr. H. T. Martin, of the paleontological museum of the University of Kansas, reported the discovery in the coal measures of Kansas, on Wakarusa Creek, some five miles southeast of Lawrence, of a series of eight footprints in a heavy sandstone formation. They were found by two young men, the sons of Dr. Coghill, who called Mr. Martin's attention to them. They are not very large—about six or seven inches by six—and spaced about thirty inches apart, but they are remarkable because of the geological age to which they belong.

The coal measures long antedated the Triassic and Jurrassic rocks of the Connecticut valley. They were before the appearance on earth of the dinosaurs, and there is some doubt as to the proper classification of the creatures that left these footmarks in Kansas. But they were vertebrates, and, according to Mr. Martin, the largest representatives of the back-boned animals that are so far known to have lived in the time of the coal measures.

London Dance Clubs

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Little tables by twos and threes, clusters of soft pink moons that shed a flattering light; the throb and thrum of violins and drums, and in the centre of the room a not very wide strip of satiny dance floor.

A bland and sleek-headed maitre d hotel (if he be fat so much the better), waiters ready to spring to attention at a nod or to fade away at a frown, and somewhere in the background, unobtrusive in perfect evening dress, but with every nerve taut with watchfulness, a perfectly mannered young man with an ever-ready smile—the club secretary.

That is the setting of the dance club, tucked away quietly and fashionably in a quiet and fashionable street. That is the stage ambitious promoters prepare to catch some of the joyous thousands whom they visualize as eager to dine, wine, dance and be merry.

A question of luxurious motorcars, gorgeous women and immaculate men alighting from them—that is the dream that hypnotizes them when they open, with a "grand gala night," the latest little place that aspires to become the craze of the town.

Between dream and reality, however, there is often an impassable gap.

Of all the hazardous speculations of modern civilization, the new dance club is probably the most venturesome. Fortunes have been engulfed by some. Indeed by most, of these quiet little places. Occasionally, however, several fortunes are made by one of them, and the knowledge of that one, the hope that theirs may be its successor, are the lures that drive eager speculators to open more and yet more.

ARE WOMEN BETTER AS MOTHERS TODAY?

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Features Service, Inc.

"WOMEN are better mothers than they used to be.

They're more intelligent, more in earnest, broader-minded, more tolerant—they understand their children better."

That's what a very clever and highly intelligent clubwoman said in an interview the other day.

I haven't a doubt that she meant every word of it. Maybe it's true, too.

When you read the club program for the year, and see the attention they're giving to child culture and the "Study of the Adolescent" and all the rest of it, you do begin to believe that so much intelligence and thought ought to help some. But, somehow, none of the young mothers seem to read any of these papers.

Too busy, I guess, making little frocks and knitting little socks and giving little baths, and singing nursery songs, and measuring food, and all the rest of it. And then—

But, when you look into the whist clubs and the cabarets and the dancing classes, somehow you begin to wonder again.

I dined with a friend the other night—a nice, clever friend, with lots of money and plenty of clothes, a good deal of wit, some beauty, a brilliant husband, a pretty daughter and a good-looking son.

At the table, a middle-aged woman—very smart she is in the society set—told a decidedly risque story, and Daughter laughed harder than any one else in the room—and Mother never even lifted her eyebrows.

"Mother's Such a Highbrow!"

After dinner in the library, somebody put some records on the phonograph — Schumann-Heink, don't you know, and Caruso, and the rest.

And then there were other records—some about "My Baby Vamp" and "My Jazz Child," and "Papa's Blue-Eyed Doll," and everybody hummed and joined in the chorus—Mother and Father, too, and the good-looking son sat in the corner and made love to a pretty young married woman, and her husband sat in another corner and made love—oh, jesting, amusing love, of course, but still, love — to pretty Daughter.

And no one was in the least surprised or at all disturbed.

I saw a girl I knew in a strange part of the town the other night.

I was there on business—she was there "slumming."

It was great fun, she said, to see the dope fiends, and the burglars, and the rest, awfully interesting, she thought. And the man who stood with her on the sidewalk, while the rest of the party went into the dive they were going to visit, was a hand-dog, disreputable rascal, if ever there was one in the world.

Mother was not in the party.

"Mother's such a highbrow," said the Daughter. "She's gone to a lecture on psycho-analysis, as a guide to understanding the young."

Person Bound to Wonder

Down the highway the other day something happened to one of the tires, and we stopped in the shade to have a new tire put on. And out of the roadhouse by the side of the road came two girls I know and two men I don't know.

I had just seen the mothers of both these girls on the porch of another farther up the road with men who did not belong to their husband's clubs.

Women in good society, both of them—and women of good repute, comparatively.

That's why I wonder if women really are "better mothers than they used to be"—all of them, all of the time.

To the Editor

Automobile Accidents

Editor Boston American:

It is estimated that 15,000 persons were killed outright in the United States in 1921 by automobile accidents. This was an increase of 3,000 over the previous year. In 1920 it was estimated by the Insurance Press that 12,000 persons were killed by automobiles and a million and a half injured.

The number of persons crippled for life was not estimated, but would probably be appalling. The majority of these accidents were undoubtedly caused by persons driving with reckless and excessive speed. Penalties for speeding have been tried and have failed.

I believe at least ten thousand lives a year could be saved by passing a law that no automobile capable of traveling faster than fifteen miles an hour should be manufactured or sold for use upon public roads.

Fifteen miles an hour is faster than the best and swiftest pair of carriage horses can trot, and is quite fast enough for all purposes of pleasure.

BERTRAND SHADWELL.

SPILLING OF TEA AND BURNING COTTON

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

SURELY, you still enjoy the memory of the tea-party you attended in Boston harbor, a century and a half ago. Perhaps, then, you will be pleased to accept an invitation to another party today.

This time you are asked to make a big excursion to far-away India. But the spirit-journey will involve no expense—beyond an outlay of intelligent sympathy. And such spending always means having and gaining!

When the American colonists, disguised as Indians, spoiled a cargo of good tea by spilling it overboard, they not only took liberties with the cheering, non-intoxicating, national drink of none-too-merry England, but they made a picturesque protest against the unprincipled principle of taxation without representation.

At this safe distance of time and space we can see the jest of that situation. But the Boston Tea Party was no joke in those colonial days.

Indeed, it was another of the unmistakable signs of the oncoming throes of Revolution. Just as surely as is the burning of cotton now in India!

It is not fair to fact to say that England learns no lessons. On the contrary, she has learned much since the achievement of American independence. Hence, the United Kingdom, which is a federation of practically sovereign states.

Except Ireland

Except Ireland, which—after much bloody and futile reluctance on the part of England—is attaining the status of an associated nation. And Egypt, whose sovereignty also is about to be recognized at London.

And India, which looms on the international horizon, huge and menacing.

Many believe that this black cloud portends the storm which is to bring the destruction of disruption to the British Empire. But Britannia, which so long has ruled the waves, may know how to bow to this blast also and thus may manage to ride the storm in safety.

Even if her Ship of State is saved, be sure that it can only be through lightening of the load by further abandonment of cargo.

England can save herself only by allowing practical self-government to India.

England has deadened India's culture and killed her industry; she has exploited India's resources, for the enrichment of England and the spoliation and impoverishment of India.

She has encouraged the traffic in opium and liquors, and has denied India's thirst for education. She has forced upon India the blight of a foreign civilization, with militarism and famine as the cruel symbols of England's despotism.

And now the patient worm has turned.

India has not become avowedly Christian, but she is practicing the militant pacifism of Jesus, under the fairly hypnotic leadership of the Mahatma Gandhi.

That soldier-saint's passive policy of non-co-operating, non-trading, non-resistance alone holds in check the sullenly rebellious millions, who probably cannot be indefinitely restrained.

Lately, they built huge bonfires of their clothes made of cotton manufactured in England. And the people of India are bringing out the old spinning wheels to make their own cotton cloth.

All this may sound impractical, and probably it is. But so was the spilling of the tea in Boston harbor!

First Shot

And yet that seemingly so insignificant act was followed pretty promptly by the incident at Concord bridge and the firing of the shot heard round the world.

Indeed, all the cannonade and bombardment of the recent war were world-shaking reverberations of that shot fired by the colonial farmers. And Russia is another; and China another, and India still another.

India can no more be permanently a British possession than China can be parcelled out by England and Japan, or Russia fall between her external exploitors and her internal usurpers.

By the light of those bonfires of British cotton we can look into the heart of those hundreds of millions of Hindus and Chinese and Russians, all yearning to breathe free.

That lurid scene in far-off India blends with the grey-green of Boston harbor, and illumines anew the meaning of that earlier incident in New England.

Essentially, they both have exactly the same significance. They are episodes of the same human drama, The Awakening of Man.

Self-direction and self-fulfilment are the unalienable right and the inevitable destiny of all human beings.

They can no more be successfully denied to the real India by modern Britain than they could be kept, a century and a half ago, from the America which Columbus thought to be the fabled India of his day.
